PREMIER FURTHERS PARITY

MAG DONALD SPEECH TO SENATE ASSISTS FRIENDLY ATTITUDE

Opposes Alliance But Emphasizes General Peace

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — A distinguished diplomat who has observed the ebb and flow of world politics in many quarters of the globe said today:

"The British captured Washington in 1814 after long and bloody fighting; it has remained for a pacifist prime minister of Great Britain to do it one hundred and fifteen years later without the firing of a single shot."

Behind this somewhat waggish observation lay a sincere and eloquent tribute to J. Ramsay MacDonald, the square-built, self-made Scotsman, whose ruling passion is world peace; whose dream is a partnership of the English-speaking peoples to maintain it, and who, in the brief space of four days' intimate contact with American officials, has probably done more to accomplish it than any gold-braided diplomat in history.

Without the services of experts or the trappings of formal diplomatic intercourse, without much of anything, in fact, save an earnest, almost evangelical, profession of friendly equality, the British premier undoubtedly has accomplished things in Washington the full significance of which may not be fully realized for years. At the very lowest estimate he has brushed away international cobwebs that no amount of ordinary diplomatic intercourse could have done.

And as a result, Great Britain and the United States go into the forthcoming naval conference in January on a basis of friendly equality and earnest co-operation toward the goal of reducing armaments throughout the world. It is a long way from the ill-starred Geneva naval conference two years ago when British-American differences broke up the conference and drove a clef between London and Washington that has remained unbridled to this day.

The crowning touch of MacDonald's pilgrimage to Washington was not when he sat on a log with President Hoover in the fastness of the Virginia mountains and discussed his cherished dream of a partnership between the English-speaking peoples to maintain peace throughout the world—important as that event was.

The climax was reached when a British prime minister for the first time in history faced the American senate in session, the senate that jealously protects its prerogatives in international affairs, the senate that broke the pact of Woodrow Wilson and exclaimed:

"Parity? Take it—without reserve, heaped up and flowing over."

From any other British statesman perhaps, certainly from a Lord Balfour or a Stanley Baldwin, such a profession undoubtedly would have been taken with a grain of salt, or been interpreted as a pretty and meaningless gesture. But behind the British prime minister who stood on the rostrum there, most senators discerned at once the first laborer ever to reach the pinnacle of the premiership, a man sprung from low estate, and a man whose aversion to war and militarism in 1914-1918 almost made him a pariah in his own country, his name hissed, and his company avoided. Whatever it was, the senate unquestionably took his professions at their face value, and the chandeliers rattled with applause.

It was a stirring and never-to-be-forgotten spectacle—this appearance of a British prime minister before the senate, fresh from conference with the president of the United States, in which they between them, resolved the contentious points that had stood in the way of the actual calling of an armistice disarmament conference.

Even the cautious Borah, who is now endeavoring to make up his mind whether he can go to the London conference as one of the American delegates, was moved to describe it as a most happy occasion, and a most happy speech.

The rest of the comment from senators ran the scale of enthusiastic approval.

This one act of MacDonald's in addressing the senate—an act which incidentally he had discussed with President Hoover beforehand—probably will have a far-reaching effect, for it is this same senate that will be called upon to ratify whatever treaties emerge from the London conference.

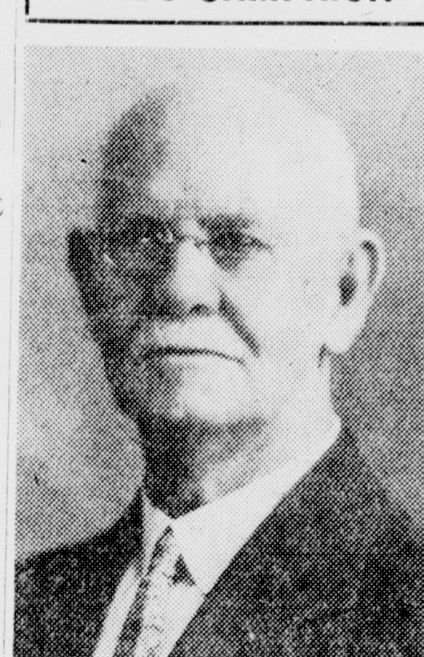

The foreign statesmen who were in Washington in great profusion for the Washington arms conference.

JURY SELECTED TO HEAR FALL BRIBERY CHARGE IN CAPITAL

Four Women, Eight Men Sitting In Oil Lease Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Washington's favorite drama, running intermittently now for the last six years, took the stage again today at district supreme court as the bribery trial of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall actually got under way.

The jury before which it will be unfolded has been selected, and to make sure that nothing distracts their attention from the words of the actors as spoken in the courtroom, and those words alone, they will remain "locked up" for the duration of the case.

Today, the plot will be outlined to them. It is still the same as it was when the senate uncovered the oil scandals of the Harding administration back in 1923, but it is still just as serviceable as ever, to wit:

Was the $100,000 in the "little black box" that passed from E. L. Doheny, the oil baron, to Fall a bribe to enable procurement of a lease on the naval oil reserves, or was it just an unsecured note from "one old friend to another?"

The mixed jury—there are four women and eight men, one of the latter a Negro—will hear from Owen J. Roberts, the special oil prosecutor, a most emphatic statement that it was an outright bribe, evidence of which every effort was made to conceal, and just as eloquently Frank J. Hogan, chief defense counsel, will assure them it was a loan made on the basis of friendship that started back in the old days when the two men prospected together in the then wild West.

SELF DEFENSE PLEA TO BE HOUSEMAID'S HOPE OF ACQUITTAL

Tentative Jury Is Selected For Murder Trial

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—In a claim of self-defense today for Mrs. Anna Szeman, 38-year-old housemaid, charged with the murder of her employer, Mrs. Dorothy M. Snyder, as her trial entered its second day.

Twelve jurors were tentatively selected yesterday to decide whether Mrs. Szeman is guilty of first degree murder. Following completion of the jury today, the prosecution was scheduled to make its opening arguments telling that its opening arguments telling that it killed her mistress with "malice and premeditation"—the penalty for which is death in the electric chair.

A double defense was placed by H. E. Varga, Hungarian consul, who is counsel for Mrs. Szeman. One was a defense of insanity and the other that of self defense, based on Mrs. Szeman's assertion that her mistress had at first attacked her with a knife.

ALBANY BASEBALL POOL UNDER FIRE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—District Attorney Clarence Unkles of Onondaga County today declared he would move to indict the alleged operators of the Albany baseball pool whose names, he said, are known to the police.

A secret investigation was instituted when William Kirkpatrick of Syracuse complained he had been refused payment of a $15,000 prize. Agents here and in Rochester, Elmira, Utica and Little Falls have been taken into custody.

EDWIN GALLOWAY MADE GENERAL CHAIRMAN OF 1930 CHEST CAMPAIGN

Will Conduct Drive In Late November Is Announced

Edwin Galloway, prominent Xenia furniture dealer, was appointed general chairman of the second annual Xenia Community Chest drive for 1930 to be conducted the latter part of November at a meeting of the chest executive committee Monday. Definite dates for the campaign have not been fixed.

In consenting to assume the responsibility of taking charge of the campaign, Mr. Galloway succeeds to the position held last year by City Auditor T. H. Zell, who successfully directed the first drive "over the top."

Last year eight Xenia charitable organizations benefited by the chest campaign. They were: Social Service League, Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Federated P.T.A., Xenia Garden Club, Xenia Recreation Association, Greene County Health League and the East Side P.T.A.

These institutional members of the chest organization, together with any other organized group or agency, public or private, which desire to participate in the coming drive, have been invited to submit their 1930 budgets not later than October 15 to L.M. Hyman, secretary of the executive committee.

The aggregate total of the budgets received will constitute the approximate goal of the chest campaign but the budget committee is the final authority on what amount is to be distributed to each agency.

For the drive this fall the personnel of the board of directors and the executive committee which served last year will remain the same. It is announced for the chest organization was drawn up and adopted some time ago but will not be placed in effect until next year.

In letters addressed to Xenia welfare organizations expected to participate in the chest drive, Secretary Hyman declared: "The chest drive of 1930 will soon get underway. The executive committee has been at work devising plans to make this year's drive a success. The committee feels that it proved to the public last year that the community chest is the best method for raising funds for charity work in the city. Last year the chest was something new and the public responded. It is hoped that the response will be similarly generous this year."

It is explained that the primary objects of the chest are to strengthen and make socially efficient the spirit of human helpfulness in Xenia, to afford the citizens the opportunity to contribute to welfare work through a community chest; to co-ordinate the work of the charitable, civic and philanthropic and benevolent organizations of Xenia and vicinity; to promote co-operation, efficiency and economy in their operations and to prevent as much as possible the overlapping of efforts.

MAYOR SENTENCES OPPONENT

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 8.—Mayor F. C. Johnson, a Republican, today is credited with drawing first blood in the election campaign against his Democratic opponent, T. M. Henderson.

The incumbent mayor was favored by fate. Henderson was arrested for driving an automobile while intoxicated. He was arraigned before Mayor Johnson and pleaded guilty.

Mayor Johnson fined the Democratic candidate $100 and costs and deprived him of his driving rights for six months. The city official also passed a thirty-day jail sentence against Henderson, but suspended it. And the sweetest part of the victory, according to Johnson, is the fact that there was no exertion on his part.

SEES CHILD KILLED

MT. GILEAD, O., Oct. 8.—While funeral arrangements were being made here for 3-year-old Dorothy Perrin, a grim nightmare haunted the mother, Mrs. Edward Rogers, today. The woman witnessed her daughter's death yesterday when the child was run down and killed by a school bus in front of the local postoffice. The child slipped from her mother's hand and ran directly into the path of the vehicle.

CHICOPEE FALLS, Mass., Oct. 8.—The oldest woman in Massachusetts, Mrs. Almada Bennett, 103, the "flying grandmother" died of heart trouble at her home here today following an illness of several months.

Mrs. Bennett gained national fame by taking her first airplane ride from Portland, Me., to Boston on her ninety-fifth birthday and one annually since.

"ARMED TRUCE" IN SOCIAL WAR

Dolly Gann Yields To Mrs. Howard For Dinner

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—An armed truce prevailed in social Washington today following the most brilliant function since Queen Marie of Roumania's visit some years ago at the White House.

Although at the state dinner given by President and Mrs. Hoover in honor of Prime Minister MacDonald and his daughter, Isobel, there was apparent harmony after Mrs. Edward E. Gann had accepted a seat on the left of the president in favor of Lady Isabella Howard, wife of the British ambassador. It was freely predicted that the Curtis-Gann-Alice Longworth war would be resumed during the winter.

Mrs. Longworth, daughter of a president and wife of the speaker of the house, returned to the capital at 10:30 o'clock last night, purposely delaying her arrival beyond the hour set for the Hoover dinner.

"Will you attend the dinner to Prime Minister MacDonald at the British embassy," she was asked.

"I don't know. I have not yet opened my mail," was the reply. Miss Isobel MacDonald was seated beside James O. McReynolds, associate justice of the supreme court, and referred to as "Washington's most eligible bachelor."

The seating arrangement, held secret until today, revealed that although Vice-President Curtis waived all rights of second ranking lady for his half-sister and official hostess, Mrs. Gann, in favor of Lady Isabella, he himself, did not relinquish his social rank to the British ambassador.

By consent of Vice-President Curtis, Lady Isabella Howard was taken to the public last year that the community chest is the best method for raising funds for charity work in the city. Last year the chest was something new and the public responded. It is hoped that the response will be similarly generous this year.

That, together with the declaration of Speaker and Mrs. Longworth simplified somewhat President Hoover's problem. But the fact remains that "Princess Alice" has determined not to accept any invitations during the winter where "Dolly" Gann will be seated above her.

One phase of the controversy raging around Mrs. Gann which the state department's protocol division apparently overlooked with regard to her social status, was that Secretary of State Stimson himself has made sure where she shall sit at American functions. Until now "Dolly" was only assured first place at the home of diplomats by grace of the decision announced by Sir Esme Howard.

Stimson announced a hands off policy. But the vice president did some fast thinking. He formally notified Stimson that he waived his step-sister's "rights" to precedence solely for the Hoover dinner. Stimson announced it and used the vice president's own words, and according to the social arbiters, thereby put the official stamp of approval of the Curtis-Gann contentions.

The fliers are awaiting a new fuel supply before taking off for Tokyo.

BUCKLEY APPEAL IS BEING HEARD

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 8.—Bert B. Buckley, ex-state treasurer, and convicted of attempted bribery as an outgrowth of his alleged connection with the Cincinnati "beer-brewery-bribery" scandal, is to face another court hearing here today.

Arguments for a reversal of his conviction which resulted in a two and one half years' federal penitentiary sentence, are expected to be heard in the United States court of appeals this afternoon.

Buckley, a gray-haired man who has seen more than fifty summers, is also under sentence to pay a $1,000 fine.

PROBE OF CULT STIRS WEST COAST

Mrs. May O. Blackburn, 48, and her daughter, Ruth Welland, 22, leaders of a Los Angeles religious cult, have been placed under arrest on charges of grand fraud while police investigate the death, four years ago, of Willa Rhoads, 16-year-old priestess of the cult, whose body has been found under the residence of her foster parents, and the mysterious disappearance of two other women. The fraud charges have resulted from the complaint of a wealthy oil man who alleges Mrs. Blackburn and her daughter obtained $40,000 from him in connection with a book, "The Sixth Seal," that was to be written by Mrs. Blackburn. According to the girl's foster parents she was to be resurrected with the completion of the book. Both Mrs. Blackburn and her daughter have denied the charges, saying that they did not promise resurrection.

LOBBY INVESTIGATION STEALS SPOTLIGHT FROM NEW TARIFF

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The senate's sweeping inquiry into activities of congressional lobbies today threatened to steal the spotlight of Capitol Hill from the tariff lobby, so that while the senate debates the bill, the country will be treated to an "inside picture" as to how the rates were fixed.

A program of procedure for the lobby investigation will be adopted this week, possibly today, by the newly-named committee of Senators Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas chairman; Borah, Republican, Idaho; Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin; Robinson, Republican, Indiana and Walsh, Democrat, Montana. The investigation will start with the tariff lobby, so that while the senate debates the bill, the country will be treated to an "inside picture" as to how the rates were fixed.

"We intend to give the country a cross-section of lobby activities," said Caraway. "We will show the American people just how a lobby gets and just what it does. That will be my purpose in this inquiry. We will go after the lobbies, large or small, that have scandalously affixed themselves like parasites on the body of congress. These pernicious organizations must be driven out of Washington."

While great interest centered on the lobby inquiry, the senate continues of the new bill with administrative features hoping to reach the ratification later in the week.

They were ready for their next great political test—namely, the Thomas motion to recommit the whole bill to the senate finance committee with instructions to eliminate all increases in industrial rates.

The long delay encountered by the alman in getting news to the world that they had shattered all previous records has now been explained by the fact they were held prisoners by Chinese forces who feared they were Russian spies sent to reconnoitre over Manchuria territory.

They were held captive in the residence of General Van Fu-Lin, head of the Heling-Kiang provisional government, who, in the belief he had captured two Soviet spies, telegraphed to Mukden for instructions.

Almost a week passed before the matter was cleared up and the Chinese authorities learned their "captive" were the two world-famous aviators. Costes and Bellonte were then permitted to proceed to Tientsin.

The fliers are awaiting a new fuel supply before taking off for Tokyo.

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 8.—Howard Ehmke pitched the Philadelphia Athletics, American League flag winners, to a 3 to 1 victory over Wigley's Chicago gunmen, in the opening game of the world series classic here this afternoon, making the Mackmen one up on the Cubs.

Ehmke was in great form and struck out twelve batters, at one time fanning five in a row. For six innings the game was a great pitcher's battle between Ehmke and Charley Root, pride of Middletown, who started on the hill for the Cubs. Neither team could cross the plate for six frames but in the first of the seventh, with one down, Fox, Athletic first-baseman, broke the ice when he knocked a home run far over the center field barrier with the bases empty.

Philadelphia added two runs in the ninth on two errors and as many hits. Ehmke was deprived of a shutout when an error by Dykes paved the way for the lone Chicago run in the last of the ninth. A single by Stephenson drove in the Cubs' only tally. The crowd numbered 51,800.

FIRST INNING
Philadelphia—Bishop grounded out to Grimm, unassisted. Haas struck out. Cochrane walked. Simmons fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—McMillan fouled out to Cochrane directly behind the plate. English singled, the ball being deflected off Ehmke's glove. Miller raced back to the fence for Hornsby's long drive, holding English on first. Miller also took Wilson's high fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

SECOND INNING
Philadelphia—Fox hit sharply to left for a single. Miller fanned swinging. Dykes singled between short and third. Fox stopping at second. Boley hit into a fast double play, English to Hornsby to Grimm. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Chicago—With the count three and two, Cuyler struck out. Stephenson was called out on strikes. Grimm lined a single to center. Taylor popped to Fox. No runs, one hit, no errors.

THIRD INNING
Philadelphia—Ehmke raised an infield fly. McMillan, Bishop out on a liner to English. Haas received a base on balls. A grounder by Cochrane hit McMillan in the shoulder but the third-sacker picked it up and threw him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Root struck out. McMillan singled over second. English doubled to right field, sending McMillan to third. Ehmke fanned Hornsby. Wilson also struck out, swinging. No runs, two hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING
Philadelphia—Simmons lifted to Stephenson. Fox grounded out. Hornsby to Grimm. Hornsby also threw out Miller. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Cuyler fanned for the second time. Dykes robbed Stephenson for an apparent hit with a sensational diving catch of his liner. He made the catch with his gloved hand while sliding along the ground. Grimm walked. Grimm is out stealing. Cochrane to Bishop. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FIFTH INNING
Philadelphia—Dykes struck out. So did Boley. Stephenson took Ehmke's fly on the foul line. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Simmons leaped over almost into the left field stands to make a fine one-handed catch of Ehmke's fly.

SIXTH INNING
Philadelphia—Cochrane hit safely past Hornsby. Simmons was safe at first and Cochrane at second on an error by English, the first mis-play of the game. English also muffed up a roller by Fox and hands are safe. Miller singled through the pitcher's legs, scoring Cochrane and Simmons and putting Fox on third. Dykes hit to Bush, who trapped Fox between third and home. Bush tossed to Gonzales, who nipped Fox at the plate. This play was duplicated on a hit by Boley to Bush, who tossed to Gonzales catching Miller at the plate. McMillan gobbled up Ehmke's roller and threw him out at first. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Chicago—Ehmke blocked down Wilson's terrific liner, threw him out, and then collapsed. Ehmke is revived and returns to the mound. Cuyler grounded to Dykes, who threw wildly to first, the ball rolling into the Athletics' dugout. The batter reached second. Stephenson singled, scoring Cuyler. Grimm singled to right, Stephenson stopping at second. Blair, batting for Gonzales, forced Grimm at second. Dykes to Bishop, Stephenson taking third. Tolson, batting for Bush, fanned for the third out. One run, two hits, one error.

SEVENTH INNING
Philadelphia—Wilson made a wonderful "circus" catch of Simmons' fly to short center. Fox smacked a home run over the center field barrier on the second pitched ball. Miller filed to Cuyler. Stephenson gathered in Dykes' lone fly. One run, one hit, no errors.

Chicago—Cuyler hit a hard grounder over second for a hit. Stephenson singled to left, Cuyler advancing to second. Grimm sacrificed, Ehmke to Fox, both runners advancing a base. Heathcote, batting for Taylor, hit a short fly to center. Cuyler holding third. Hartnett, batting for Root, fanned.

EIGHTH INNING
Philadelphia—Guy Bush is now pitching for the Cubs with Gonzales behind the plate. Boley's grounder to second was turned in to a putout, English to Grimm. Ehmke received a great ovation from the fans, then responded with a single between center and first. Bishop lofted to Stephenson. Wilson made a running catch of Haas' fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Chicago—Haas came in for McMillan's easy fly. Miller camped under a fly from the bat of English. Hornsby out. Bishop to Fox. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NINTH INNING
Philadelphia—Cochrane hit safely past Hornsby. Simmons was safe at first and Cochrane at second on an error by English, the first mis-play of the game. English also muffed up a roller by Fox and hands are safe. Miller singled through the pitcher's legs, scoring Cochrane and Simmons and putting Fox on third. Dykes hit to Bush, who trapped Fox between third and home. Bush tossed to Gonzales, who nipped Fox at the plate. This play was duplicated on a hit by Boley to Bush, who tossed to Gonzales catching Miller at the plate. McMillan gobbled up Ehmke's roller and threw him out at first. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Chicago—Ehmke blocked down Wilson's terrific liner, threw him out, and then collapsed. Ehmke is revived and returns to the mound. Cuyler grounded to Dykes, who threw wildly to first, the ball rolling into the Athletics' dugout. The batter reached second. Stephenson singled, scoring Cuyler. Grimm singled to right, Stephenson stopping at second. Blair, batting for Gonzales, forced Grimm at second. Dykes to Bishop, Stephenson taking third. Tolson, batting for Bush, fanned for the third out. One run, two hits, one error.

Before Women's Clubs

MISS Helen Hoover Santmyer, Xenia writer, will be one of the principal speakers at the middle north district conference of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs at Sidney, October 15 and 16.

Nearly three hundred women representing five city federations and seventy-three individual clubs in twelve counties, are expected to attend the conference. The program is being arranged by Mrs. B. W. Jones, Troy, district president.

MISS SANTMYER

Xenia will send representatives from the Woman's Club and the Junior Woman's Club. The Research Club of Cedarville will send several representatives. Speakers at the conference will include state officials and two outside people, Mrs. Ernest Cookson Milner, dean of women at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., and Miss Santmyer.

The following middle north district chairmen will take part in the two day sessions: Mrs. Margaret Barton, Bellefontaine; Mrs. Nellie McCabe, Piqua; Mrs. Leon Coppeck, Tippicanoe City; Mrs. W. D. DeWeese, Xenia; John DeFrees, Xenia; C. G. Snook and Mrs. W. P. P.

LAL BACH SOCIETY HAS FIRST MEETING

The Lal Bach Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church held its first regular monthly meeting, of the new conference year Monday evening at the church, with an interesting program given by the Children's Missionary Society, of the church.

The children's program was under the direction of Mrs. George Street and opened by the children singing "Builders All." This was followed by stories given by Georgia Barnes, Marie Truesdale, Eileen Beatty and Mildred Leveck who told of the happiness given them by the missions in Africa.

Little Jimmy Stout read the story "Work and Play of the Boys and Girls of Africa," followed by a story of "How the Japanese Clean House" by Robert Leveck.

Little Rachel Bell, dressed as a Japanese girl, explained "What it Means to be a Girl in Japan." "The Holy Man of India" was read by Marie Truesdale. The children closed their program by singing two songs.

During the business session, Mrs. William Wilson, chairman, gave a short report of the box which was sent to the African mission school, for the Christmas party. Mrs. F. C. Bishop was appointed by the chairman to buy and send to another school in Africa, embroidery patterns on which all the children like to work.

Mrs. Ernest Beatty, chairman of the membership committee, reported three new members: Mrs. Bert Conklin, Mrs. M. C. Smith and Mrs. Paul Barger.

Mrs. Marjorie McGarey Wilson, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Street at the piano, sang several vocal numbers. Two readings were given by Little Jean Conklin, student of Mrs. Schick, (Esther Smith).

Mrs. Harold Owens and Mrs. William Wilson were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Dayton district to be held at the St. Paul M. E. Church in Dayton, October 11. Mrs. Thea White was appointed alternate.

"Saved for Service" was the topic chosen by Mrs. George Bootes, who had charge of the devotionals of the day.

Mrs. Gerge Eckerle of Jamestown and Mrs. Marjorie McGarey Wilson were the only out of town guests present at the meeting.

The hostesses, who were Mrs. Clara Reutinger, Mrs. J. A. Beatty, Mrs. Edward Hunt, Mrs. George White, Mrs. Lynn Johnson, Mrs. George Bootes, Mrs. Martha Adams and Miss Wella Shipley, served a dainty refreshment course at the close of the meeting.

The next monthly meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Maude Stark. Mrs. Minor Monroe and Miss Wella Shipley will present the program.

LAST BRIDGE-LUNCHEON ENJOYED AT CLUB

Mrs. Charles Darlington, Mrs. Harry D. Smith and Mrs. Charles Weaver delightedly entertained with private parties at the last of the regular weekly bridge-lunches at the Xenia Country Club, Monday.

Bridge preceded the luncheon and at Mrs. Darlington's party, Miss Elizabeth-Ewing of Los Angeles, Calif., was honor guest. Mrs. Findley Torrence was awarded the high score prize and Miss Ewing was presented a lovely guest prize.

Mrs. T. C. Long was awarded first prize at bridge at Mrs. Smith's party while Mrs. Lawrence Landaker received second. Miss Evelyn Mercer of Cincinnati was the only out of town guest.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE MIGHTY GOD — For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.—Luke 1:49.

THE MERCY OF GOD — His mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.—Luke 1:50.

GUSTAV STRESEMANN

The sudden dropping of Gustav Stresemann in the harness of public life is a reminder that the world still produces men willing to sacrifice themselves for their countries as well in peace as in war. The progressive decline of his health under the load of responsibility he was carrying was reported by the correspondents. Stresemann voluntarily submitted to slow death on the altar of national duty.

The political genius of this statesman who twice became chancellor of the German republic and five times its foreign minister was revealed in his early sensing the potentialities of the democratic spirit revived in Germany by the war, as well as in the ability he subsequently displayed in guiding it into orderly and constructive channels of expression. This was not an easy task. Abroad he had to contend with the still smoldering enmities lighted by the war, which reached their bitterest and most provocation length in France, where the conciliatory Aristide Briand was but a weak brake on the fire-eating Poincare. At home he had to defend his policies against the attacks of a strong, although slowly diminishing reactionary element, which interpreted every step he took to ameliorate the condition in which the war had left his country as a surrender to its former enemies.

Stresemann realized that Germany was in a position where she had to give way. We fancy that he realized, too, that if she persists in the ways of patience and industry that he counseled, she will eventually again come into her own. Gustav Stresemann's patriotism was based on a full appreciation of the realities of national and international politics. There was nothing chauvinistic about it. Germany loses in him a bulwark of the policy of conciliation, which has done much to regain for her the friendship of her late enemies.

The dominant role he played in the recent reparations negotiations which remain to be ratified, as well as the strength his genius for compromise gave to the present German government, will make his death all the more keenly felt. Whether Germany has a second Stresemann to step into the shoes of the first remains to be seen. Opportunity again may produce the man. At least the German republic is in a better position today to accept the blow than it was before Stresemann became the outstanding architect of its destiny. The stones that he worked into its foundation, at the cost of his life, will be his monument.

FOR CONGRESSMEN

Assistant Secretary Lowman defends the restoration of the courtesy-of-the-port privilege to congressmen returning from pleasure trips abroad by the following syllogism: A high government official is entitled to the courtesy of the port. A congressman is a high government official. A congressman is therefore entitled to the courtesy of the port.

The conclusion to which this syllogism has brought the treasury department is voided by a defective minor premise. We submit in rebuttal: Constitutionally a congressman is a high government official only when he is in attendance at a session of congress or traveling to or from such a session. A congressman is not above the constitution. A congressman returning from a pleasure trip abroad is therefore without any claim whatsoever to treatment as a high government official, at a port of entry or anywhere else.

The treasury department issued an order on June 1, withdrawing from congressmen the privilege of having the inspection of their baggage expedited. The decision of that order would seem to invite the senate to add to its inquisitorial agenda an investigation of the real cause of this volte face.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Maybe you're a statistician to whom a bunch of figures carry an appeal, all their own. If so, inhale the following:

New York's 18,000 Boys in Blue have the colossal task of safeguarding a daylight population of eight million souls.

"Souls" is a good word.

There are also 30,001 speak-easies running day and night in town besides safeguarding the eight million "souls" some of The Boys have to do their own collecting from the Beer Barons.

It ain't right, Grover. It ain't right!

AN EX-COP SPEAKS

"I been a po-lie-man all my life," says former Commissioner Richard Enright, running for mayor on the "Square Deal" ticket. "You can write this down in your little book. If they's a speaky runnin' on a cop's post, an' said cop don't close aforementioned speaky, he's either a dumbbell or a crook.

SPEAKING OF JOKES

Speaking of great men: There's your college chum, Tom Masson, one time editor of Life, until Charles Dana Gibson came along and took all the color out of the glad rag. After he quit Life, Tom sat around the chateau in Montclair, banging the little elisemith for a book or two a year, and finally feeling in need of a rest, took over the joke page on the Saturday Evening Post.

Recently Tom wrote a magazine article in which he set out to show that Americans have no sense of humor. And to prove that Tom knew what he was talking about, George Horace Lorimer, Pooh Bah of The Post, took exception to the yarn, and now Tommy ain't editin

AS TO ANCESTORS

We owe a lot to our ancestors. There is, of course, more in heredity than in environment. But there is such a thing as riding on the oars of ancestry and getting nowhere. We should be grateful for the inheritance of a strong constitution, for the bequest of ideals, and for any habit of thoughtfulness that may come naturally to us. But a long time ago it was well said that the man who has not anything to boast of but his illustrious ancestors is like a potato—the only good belonging to him is underground.

Ancestry, no matter how good, is something to spring from and not to stay with.

IN THE HEART OF FOLKS

Hearing news of new laws in Russia one begins to think the men at the head of the government there—some of whom are very able men—may have something to teach the rest of the nations. Travelers tell of regulations that might be good for the United States. And then comes a new law out of Moscow which exposes the government as hopelessly dumb in spots. One learns from the dispatches that a new edict has abolished the celebration of Christmas and all other religious holidays. But Christmas can't be touched by man-made rules. Christmas lives imperishably in the heart of folks.

$7,000,000 INSURANCE

Pierre S. DuPont, Wilmington, Delaware, believes in life insurance. He carries policies for $7,000,000. John Willis believes in it, too. He carries a little under two million. Schenck, Lasky and Zukor, in the motion picture and theatre business, carry $5,000,000 each. The fact is there are more than 300 American business men and others who carry a million or more. Somebody says insurance does not pay dividends enough. That's worth looking into. There must be some reason for the fact that the most successful and hard-headed business men are usually the ones with the largest insurance policies.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF AVIATION ADVOCATED

By JOHN L. CABLE

Congressman from Ohio

(John L. Cable was born at Lima, O., Apr. 15, 1884. He is a graduate of Kenyon college and George Washington university. In 1909 he began the practice of law at Lima. He was prosecuting attorney of Allen county from 1917 to 1921. He was elected to congress in the latter year from the fourth Ohio district and has been returned each term since. He is a Republican.)

Authority to the Interstate Commerce commission to regulate interstate air commerce in order to stabilize that industry is proposed in a bill I have just introduced in the house.

The purpose of the bill is to stabilize the industry which has enjoyed the most spectacular development of any this country has ever witnessed—I mean commercial aviation.

This phenomenal development surpasses the hopes of the most optimistic pioneers. The future of commercial aviation is bright; its brightness attracts. Each month new transportation and manufacturing companies are organized. Competition is keener, and will become keener still.

Competition is stimulative, if not too sharp; but it becomes destructive, if cut-throat methods are allowed to creep in. Protection and encouragement of infant industries is, and long has been, a policy of the American government, and the protection offered by this new bill is consistent with that policy.

Most of the states, feeling that air commerce needs as much regulation as motor bus commerce, have enacted laws to that end. But such laws are inadequate; air commerce is for the most part, interstate, and state boundaries mean as little to an air pilot as county lines mean to a motor bus driver. Adequate protection and regulation can be provided by the federal government alone.

I have sensed a need of uniform regulation by the federal government and have, for that reason, provided in this bill that the Interstate Commerce commission shall have the power to regulate interstate air commerce.

Transportation companies must maintain equipment that will assure the traveling public of safety, or else forfeit their operating privileges. If one company gives satisfactory service between two terminals, it alone will be granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity, and another may not operate over that route. Rate-fixing by the commission will prevent exploitation of the public, and yet leave the operator of a reasonable income.

The protection provided by certificates of public convenience and necessity should serve the best interest of the public and, at the same time, encourage the development of commercial aviation.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

All over the world, except, perhaps, in remote regions of South Africa and Siberia, Tempo is the topic of the day. On the continent and in America the twentieth century is acclaimed the speed age—but all other countries concede that America has out-temped all the others.

While leisurely ladies and gentlemen sip melange under the Arcades on the Champs Elysee, or Unter den Linden, they talk of Wild America, where people are mad for money and where leisure is an unknown quantity; where men dash about making fortunes on the stock exchange, and where women tear from one social engagement to another, not even spending enough time to protect and preserve their loveliness.

When a gorgeously gowned, slenderly beautiful American woman appears at the Folies Bergere, the French women raise their fans and whisper, "Yes, she is exquisite, but in ten-years—what then? She has no time to care for her beauty!"

And yet the truth of the matter is, the rich American woman spends more money in unbelievably luxurious, leisurely treatments than any other woman in the world. The New York beauty salon is her Mecca. She takes one treatment for $35, or perhaps pays hundreds of dollars to contract for two treatments a week over a period of a year. When she is ready to sail to Europe, she takes with her hundreds of dollars' worth of beauty creams and lotions in exquisite traveling boxes designed just for this purpose. No sooner is Paris reached than she calls at the Parisian home of her favorite beauty specialist, and so on from Paris to Rome, to Vienna to London. Always she finds her rendezvous with beauty.

At no time in history, nowhere else in the world, is there such an exactitude of standard of beauty as in New York. Morning must bring with it a scented soap, delightful bath salts, and exquisitely light fragrance to harmonize with the delicate mood of early morning. Luncheon may mean another perfume, a special lipstick, a subtle rouge. If the costume is to be blue, then the make-up to go with it must blend. At night the American woman discloses the exotic in her nature. She uses dark powders, or those tinted with mauve or green to bring out mysterious lights in the eyes. Her lipstick is often daringly vibrant.

The rich American woman of today is a chameleon in her devotion to beauty. However, she does not confine herself to color alone; but is equally changeable because of her mood, the time of the day, or because of the nature of the occasion.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Given a free hand, as Washington's law enforcement officer, Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, of the marine corps, unquestionably could and would show the country one bone dry spot in the United States to judge prohibition by.

Senator Robert B. Howell, of Nebraska, was exactly right in what he told his fellow legislators a few days ago:

The capital is wet.

Open-minded drys, like Senators Howell and Smith V. Brookhart, of Iowa, themselves admit it. It is in a naturally wet area, the same as its nearby neighbor, Baltimore, whose wetness is generally conceded.

Washington can be dried up, however. There may be doubt concerning the practicability of such a campaign in some wet centers. There is no doubt concerning the possibility of drying up the capital—provided the right man is put on the job, with carte blanche to go the limit.

The right man! Carte blanche! The combination is essential.

Now General Butler is the "right man." Several others, who looked all right, have been tried out and found wanting, because they proved to lack the necessary composure, when it came to a showdown. Smed Butler has been tested; he has it. True, the Philadelphia wets beat him—out carte blanche was denied to him in Philadelphia. It was promised to him but he never got it.

Smed is hard boiled enough to accept an invitation to a party at an acquaintance's house and then prefer charges against his host for serving cocktails at that very function.

It was by doing just this thing that the general won the sobriquet of "Smedley" which he is known by (behind his back) in the navy.

There are naval officers who declare that a man who would do a thing like that would do anything. Precisely; it is just that quality which makes the general's ability to dry up Washington such a certainty.

him; Washington is municipally bossless.

Serene in the knowledge of the White House's approval (if, according to him without a single string on it), the general's only other consideration need be congress, when in session—which it frequently is not for nine months at a time—and which, even in session, is an exceedingly slow-moving body—besides being politically dry by a huge majority.

The ideal moment to hand his commission to General Butler would be right after the lawmakers' spring adjournment—thus guaranteeing him hard work to a year of uninterfered-with activity.

Then the fun could begin—as it would, it's ten to one betting.

The devil dog veteran's initial difficulty in Philadelphia arose from his ambition to make prohibition as airtight for the Quaker City's aristocracy as for its lowly and humble.

Had he confined himself to raiding cheap bootleggers all would have been well—but when he started breaking into good society, believe me, good society resented it. In fact, it put the skids under the general as speedily as it was able, which was pretty speedily.

Now, the beauty of the situation is that, for every one high muck-a-muck in Philadelphia, there are whole city blocks of them in Washington.

Smed Butler would have regular palaces to raid in this town, by the hundred. He would have a convention or two a week to raid in this burg, compared with only two or three times a year in Philadelphia. The folk he caught here would be national reputations instead of mere state-wide fame, as in Philly.

The district is so small, too, and its boundaries are so sharply defined that the general could police it as thoroughly as he polices the marines' reservations at Quantico.

Licker could be stepped from coming in, all right, after a dozen or twenty runners had been interred alongside the highways entering it from Maryland and Virginia—and Smed Butler is a crusader accustomed to the use of firearms.

Senator Howell wants the ban slapped onto embassy booze. It would add to the enjoyment of the situation, certainly. However, it would not make much real difference. Leaks from the embassies and legations are hardly worth speaking of. Besides, the general could cork even them up for embassy licker becomes as contraband as any other kind the minute it overflows diplomatic premises.

Shall We Omit the Setting-Up Exercises and Cold Shower?

Dr. Jesse F. Williams, professor of physical education, Teachers college, Columbia university, has certainly created a stir by his statement that morning setting-up exercises and cold showers are not so beneficial as is commonly supposed, and are "silly, superstitious and artificial."

Certainly setting-up exercises are artificial, but I don't agree with Dr. Williams that they are silly and superstitious. I do agree that they are not so beneficial as is believed. For the simple reason that they are not practiced systematically enough! Naturally, I'm talking about the normal, not those who have some contra-indication to exercises.

As I understand, Dr. Williams was against the set "setting-up" exercises, not exercises such as walking and games. Certainly games, especially outdoor games, that call into play most of the muscles of the body, are more beneficial than ordinary setting-up exercises. Golf, for instance, tennis, swimming and hiking, especially over hilly ground. But how about the many who haven't time for these diversions? They certainly should have some daily systematic exercise.

It is the exercises of the trunk muscles that you get in the setting-up exercises, that are of especial value. We have literally thousands of letters of appreciation from the use of our articles on the Tummy Ten, which outlines a series of exercises for the trunk. Posture has improved (and posture has a great deal to do with normal health), constipation is remedied, many cases of misplacements of organs with the resultant aching backs are helped. Altogether, there is too much evidence from all sources of the benefits of setting-up exercises to discountenance them.

Our labor-saving devices—automobiles, elevators and other modern improvements—are taking away much of the natural exercise we used to get. Cancer, heart and kidney disease, liver disease, with stones, diabetes—the so-called degenerative diseases—are on the increase. And one of the reasons they are on the increase is that we do not get enough exercise. We continue the same eating habits that we used to enjoy in youth when we were more active, and we pile on weight. Overweight with its stasis of the circulation, and tissue fluids, is the forerunner of many of the diseases I have mentioned.

As far as the cold bath is concerned, I am a firm believer in it. Personally, I like a tub of cold water better than I do the cold shower, and I get a kick from it that I'm sure is very beneficial. I wouldn't think of beginning the day without it. There is one pretty safe rule to go by, in the use of cold water—if you feel warm and glowing and alive after its use, then you should take it. Even those who do not get a good reaction should gradually condition themselves by first splashing cold water on the face and chest and daily increasing the surfaces that are splashed.

Dr. Williams is also reported to have said that the alarm clock is pernicious because it awakens violently. I don't agree with him there, either, for I believe the better sleep, on account of the relief from worrying about whether one would wake up on time, counteracts the shock of the alarm. If one didn't awake on time, the hurry and worry of being late and the gulping down of the breakfast would also be more harmful than the shock.

I suggest you send for our article on the Atonic Abdominal Wall which gives the Tummy Ten exercises. And don't omit your setting-ups and your cold bath, if you are able to take them.

If you want to realize the value of exercise I suggest you read Dr. Williams' book, "Personal Hygiene Applied." I think his talk must have been misunderstood by the newspaper reporters.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I guess it's the same old story over and over again. You see I used to travel with every Tom, Dick and Harry. Then I met a wonderful young fellow two years my senior. I went with him and he finally told me he loved me.

"Well, I met a girl and she did a lot of persuading for me not to go with a steady fellow. I didn't know my own mind, and the young fellow thought I didn't care for him and didn't come any more. Well, the months went by, and I found I truly loved him. He came back and seems to love me more than ever.

"But Virginia, he doesn't really believe in me. Often he brings back the scene in March and says he's afraid to fall in love with me again. I gave up all my friends just to go with him. At times he says he believes me, but I know there is a doubt in his mind. We're planning to marry in two years. He hasn't given me a ring. Please tell me how I can prove to him that I love him.

"I wouldn't try any more, Dutchy. You have told him so, you have given up your other friends for him, so if he doesn't believe you he will have to disbelieve. I don't think he does doubt you, really, but he likes to punish you by reminding you of your former attitude. Don't worry about it. Next time he mentions it, say: 'Actions speak louder than words, and I've proved my love by giving up my other friends for you.' He probably will give you a ring at Christmas time or when he can afford it.

ANXIOUS: I don't know the address of either boy, Anxious, and, as I've said often before, I cannot make you acquainted with my correspondents through this column.

KITTY: No, dear, a child would not inherit a very slight delicacy that you contract through illness.

WORRIED: Insist that there was nothing wrong, state very emphatically to your father that your friend has never been too familiar, and tell him that he owes the young man an apology. Get your mother to take the same position, and, if your father does not beg his pardon and ask him to write your friend and tell him to write your father demanding such an apology or verbal retraction.

KITTY: I'm sure I don't know if the boy loves you or not, and I think it very unwise to "pick up" acquaintances like that.

PUZZLED: Bless your heart, dear, a girl of 11 is really pretty young to have boy friends, but if your mother does not disapprove there is no harm in your corresponding with this boy if you like.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

PROUD OF HIS FAMILY NAME

Peter laughed and gay Sir Butterly was much offended.

"You humans haven't very good manners, have you?" queried he, quietly. "I wouldn't think of laughing at a friend of mine, even if he did make a mistake, as perhaps I did. I don't know what an elephant is, so how should I know whether he walks, crawls or hops? What's so funny about my believing that he can even fly?"

Peter was ashamed of himself. "Forgive me, dear Sir Butterly," he pleaded. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings, but if you could dream how large an elephant is, you'd understand why I couldn't help laughing. Imagine an animal twice as big as a cow, for instance, sailing through the air as you do!"

"Tee, hee," twittered Sir Butterly. "Now that I see the joke, I can laugh with you." But for all that, Sir Butterly was not quite sure yet that Peter was through laughing at him. So Peter decided to change the subject quickly.

"What a soft, rich, red that is you're wearing, Sir Butterly," (for wise in the ways of insect-had found that a little flattery worked wonders in soothing wounded feelings). "Did anyone ever tell you that your wings look exactly like fans? Say, old chap, are these wings of yours made of feathers? They are so soft and fluffy. I've been wondering if they were, ever since I met you, but I didn't like to ask you until I knew you better."

Sir Butterly was pleased, one

couldn't doubt it.

"No wonder you ask that," replied he. "And let me tell you, boy, you are not the first one. Those fluffy things you mistake for feathers are scales—some folks call them plumes, I've heard. By the way, it is from our wings we get our names. Come to think of it, I haven't told you that, have I?"

"Why, isn't your name Butterfly?" asked Peter, astonished.

"Butterfly, of course. But there's more to my name than that. I am a Scale-Wing. Cousin Moth belongs to the same family. Speaking of wings as we are, I believe," Sir Butterly waved a feeler at Peter, "we are glad we have them to get us where we are going and in a mighty hurry. But we Butterflies are proud of our legs, too. We have six legs—did you know it?"

"Not I," said Peter. "What do you do with all of them?"

"Stand on them while we rest and eat," declared the Butterly, promptly. "And say, did you know I had horns on my head?"

"Good gracious, no!" Now Peter was astonished.

"They have knobs on them, too," remarked Sir Butterly, promptly. "But if you think mine are pointed you should see those which Cousin Moth boasts. They are as pointed that one dares get in his way at his own risk of being jabbed with them. Upon my word! Speak of a friend and he's awfully near. Here comes Cousin Moth. Look at him as closely as you like, but don't touch him. He hates to be made fun of."

The task of predicting the outcome of major collegiate football games is proving duck soup for Xenia fans so far this season. The record for the first two weeks is thirty-six correct out of a possible thirty-seven.

This week Arthur Bales, former Xenian, now associated with the Universal Car Loading Co., Dayton, has consented to pick probable winners in seventeen games carded for next Saturday.

Art, however, declined to pick either Wilberforce or North Carolina State College as the winner of their intercollegiate game Saturday, believing the game will end in a tie. This opinion is based on the fact that the 'Force has acquired a habit of playing draw games in recent years. Here are his selections:

Indiana to beat Chicago.
Cincinnati to beat Kenyon.
Yale to beat Georgia.
New York U. to beat Fordham.
Berlin to beat Mt. Union.
Iowa to beat Ohio State.
Ohio Wesleyan to beat Ohio U.
Princeton to beat Brown.
Michigan to beat Purdue.
St. Xavier to beat W. Va. Wesleyan.
Syracuse to beat Nebraska.
Notre Dame to beat Navy.
Carnegie Tech to beat Western Reserve.
Wisconsin to beat Northwestern.
Wilberforce to tie North Carolina.
Wittenberg to beat Denison.
Pittsburgh to beat West Virginia.

A revision of the week's record gives the Reserves a record of eighteen victories against three defeats in twenty-one games played this season. Nine of the victories have been shutouts. Reserves have compiled a total of 140 runs, an average of six and two-thirds a game, as compared with forty-seven markers for opposing teams, an average of slightly more than two a contest, indicating a double-bias team has been getting high class pitching while the batting has also been consistently good. Reserves wind up the season in a return game with the H. and B. Ot-T Shoppe nine of Dayton next Sunday with Dick Wells again on the mound trying to duplicate his 5 to 0 shutout victory registered last Sunday.

An example of what may be termed poor sportsmanship was furnished in Saturday's double-header between the New York Giants and the Phillies, in which Klein, outfielder for the Phillies, broke the National League home run record but ended in a tie with Mel Ott, of the Giants, for the honor for the season.

Philadelphia pitchers, in the hope of making the record safe for Klein, passed Ott no fewer than five times in the second game of the twin bill, thus depriving him of the opportunity to even hit the ball. It is possible that in the ordinary pitchers were wise in issuing bases on balls to Ott but it was questionable sportsmanship to say the least when nothing of importance hinged on the outcome of the contest.

Many Xenia fans followed with interest the poll conducted by the Cincinnati Post among the readers of that newspaper relative to the choice of fans for the selection of the next manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

The poll ended last week with Larry Kopf, former Red outfielder, who has been managing the Middletown Armco's, of the K. I. O. League, as the popular choice to succeed Jack Hendricks, Ed Roush, Giant outfielder, who for many years starred in a Red uniform, was runnerup with Greasy Neale, another erstwhile Red player, getting third place.

It is also said that a number of persons are being drawn up among the fans for presentation to the Cincinnati management through the Post, suggesting that Heinie Groh be appointed coach of the team.

CLEAR SKY GREET'S SERIES OPENING

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Dawn came here today with a clear sky and a seasonable temperature which supported the prediction of fair weather made by the weather bureau yesterday.

The weather man's forecast for the day of the first world series game was: "Fair Tuesday with increasing cloudiness Wednesday, sixty degrees of temperature both afternoons."

NAMED ASSISTANT

Miss Helen Graham has been appointed assistant official court reporter for one year, effective Tuesday, by Common Pleas Judge L. L. Gowdy. She will draw a compensation of $10 a day for such days as her services as an assistant reporter are required.

SCOUT MEETING

Regular meeting of Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will be held at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Scout cabin, according to an announcement by Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury, who urges a full attendance.

REV. JAMIESON

A feature of the Tuesday evening session of the annual two-day meeting of the Second Synod of the United Presbyterian Church at the Cedarville church of that denomination will be the celebration of the eighty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the church, (shown above.) The Rev. Ralph A. Jamieson, pastor, (left below) will preside at the special anniversary program and the anniversary sermon will be preached by the Rev. O. H. Milligan, (right below) pastor of the Avalon U. P. Church, Pittsburgh, one of the surviving pastors who served the church in its more than three-quarters of a century history.

OHIO STATE ELEVEN NOT SO HOT WITTENBERG GAME INDICATES

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 8.—All during the week-end, the writer spent his time trying to think of something encouraging to say about Ohio State's football team, but all that can be said today is that it may improve.

The Buckeyes' 19 to 0 victory over Wittenberg wasn't any too imposing and even the biggest optimist on the campus can't hope for State to beat Iowa.

Even though pre-season forecasts said that the "Scarlet and Gray" gridiron machine was only "fair," the small Wittenberg score was a big disappointment.

Sam Williamson, who is just starting his coaching career at the Big Ten school here, simply hasn't much high grade material. His first team is weak in spots.

Forward wall withstood the attack of the Springfield eleven who were out for blood, but on the offensive the line was slow. The backfield, too, seemed to have trouble in getting started and

The Buccaneer mentor is drilling his squad this week on new plays that will be used against Piqua. Special emphasis is also being placed on tackling and blocking, departments in which the Bucs were weak in their first two games.

Henry Hollencamp, 79, founder and president of the H. Hollencamp Sons Co., Jefferson St., Dayton, and one of Dayton's leading citizens, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Williamson, 42 Arnold Place, Tuesday morning at 12:30 o'clock, following a heart attack suffered Monday morning.

He had been in fairly good health until this time. His mind remained clear up to an hour before his death and he passed away surrounded by his children.

Funeral services will probably be held Friday at Sacred Heart Church in Dayton and burial will be made in Calvary Cemetery there.

FROST REPORTED

With a forecast of central Ohio's first real frost of the season Monday night, farmers covered their perishable vegetables and Xenians took their overcoats from cedar chests and moth balls, but although the predicted frost materialized, it was light and no reports of damage were received at the Greene County Farm Bureau. It was also explained that practically all perishable products had been harvested.

SUBJECT OF ROTARY

J. F. McMillan, president of the Dayton Rubber Manufacturing Co., Dayton and past president of the Dayton Rotary Club, was the speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Xenia Rotary Club at Elks' Hall, Tuesday noon.

Mr. McMillan talked on the subject of "The New Nineteenth Month Calendar" and his discussion greatly interested members.

The regular business session was held following the address.

OBSERVE HOLIDAY

"Columbus Day," Saturday, October 12, will be observed as a legal holiday by Xenia banks and other financial institutions, which will remain closed all day, according to an announcement Tuesday.

Bowling Scores

Amassing 2,745 pins, the Benrus Watch bowling team, occupants of second place in the Recreation League, made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Arch-O-Pedic Shoes Monday night.

The winners rolled games of 902, 926 and 917. Thearl White led the Benrus quintet with a three-game total of 601. Luttrell and Moore each had a 513 series for the losers. Box score:

Artist Depicts High Spots in Colorful Career of Visiting British Leader

Born in 1866 of humble fishing folk in the little village of Moray Firth, Loosiemouth, Scotland, MacDonald went to London at 19, where he got a job as bus conductor. Later became invoice clerk.

Overwork broke health at 21 and future looked black until he obtained post as secretary to member of parliament. Repudiated Liberalism in 1894 and became secretary of the new Labor party.

During the years of his greatest struggle MacDonald married Margaret Ethel Gladstone, niece of Lord Kelvin. She bore him five children and died in 1911. Constantly aided her husband's success.

RAMSAY
MacDONALD

He was made leader of the Labor party in 1911 and so grew in public esteem that he was offered post in war cabinet in 1914. Refused. Headed group of pacifists in house and was denounced as Labor government traitor.

He was returned again in the election of 1922 and was again made party leader. In 1924 MacDonald became prime minister and foreign secretary in the short-lived minority government.

Defeated by Stanley Baldwin, he became leader of the opposition for four years, returning to power in the elections of May, 1929. Comes to America as good will gesture toward disarmament plans.

INTERESTING SHIP TO PARTICIPATE IN AIR TOUR

When the 30 or 40 airplanes take off from Ford airport, near Detroit, for the 5,200-mile cruise of the national air tour, officials and newspaper men will travel in this huge Curtiss transport, largest plane on the tour. Several variations characterize the ship, among them, the absence of a motor on the nose, and the water-cooled engine. It also goes back to the biplane type for lower landing speed with minimum span. The props are three-bladed to take up the enormous power of the engines. The capacity is 18 passengers and two pilots.

Loves Young Dream Loses Him His Parish

The Reverend Walter A. Miller, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Corinth, N. Y., with his fiancée, Miss Mina G. Clothier (inset), who was asked to resign his charge when deacons of the parish found that the minister attended dances with his bride to be. The request was recalled, however, when Rev. Miller promised the church authorities that he would show the art of terpsichore in the future.

WHERE MINE BLAST KILLED EIGHT

Eight miners were instantly killed at this mine at Shady Point, Okla., when a gas explosion occurred. One miner, who stopped to tie his shoelace, at the mouth of the mine, was blown 300 feet over the tippie and through the engine house. Photo shows some of wreckage.

Are You a Good Driver?

Don't straddle two lanes! The forward car in this picture is doing so and obstructs the view of the driver behind. If he attempts to pass he will have to straddle the inner lane, causing danger of accident and much profanity. Take your time, it's safer.

Seventy national officers of the Parent-Teacher association, representing 1,380,000 members, recently held a conference in Chicago to discuss the relation between parents and teachers, and methods for more effective co-operation. Photo shows, left to right, seated: Mrs. Frederick Hosmer, Auburn, N. Y., former state president; Mrs. E. C. Mason, Winchester, Mass., vice president; Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, Austin, Tex., national president; Mrs. Louis DeValiere, Trenton, N. J., fourth vice president. Standing, left to right, Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, Washington, D. C., president District of Columbia; Mrs. William F. Little, Rahway, N. J., president of the New Jersey chapter; Mrs. L. E. Watson, Hartford, Conn., president Connecticut; Mrs. F. H. DeVere, Auburn, R. I., chairman of safety committee; Mrs. William Bryce, Jr., Bedford, Pa., president of Pennsylvania.

AGUA CALIENTE'S TRACK MARKS END OF TIJUANA

BREAKING GROUND for the new AGUA CALIENTE RACE TRACK

Tijuana's Jockey club race track, 100 yards across the border, in Mexico, is no more. In its place will spring, three miles further east and also on the border, another track which will contain several innovations in race track construction and facilities for handling the public. The new track, which will cost $2,000,000 and will be completed some time in December, is to be known as the Agua Caliente Jockey club track. There will be nine private stables, in addition to the club house, paddock, recreation center and other buildings. Completion of the track will mark the passing of control by "Sunny" Jim Colfroth. He will be associated with Wirt G. Bowman, lower left, president of the new outfit. At top, breaking ground at Agua Caliente, and, lower right, diagram of the track.

Aimee's Ma Scorned Him

Stating in a Seattle court that he had been damaged "beyond monetary consideration," the Rev. H. H. Clark (below), of Seattle, Wash., fired his opening gun in a $50,000 breach of promise suit brought against Mrs. Minnie E. Kennedy (top), mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist. He in turn heard himself classed as blackmailer in the statements of the defense counsel. He claims Mrs. Kennedy had promised to marry him and build a tabernacle in Seattle in which he could conduct his religious work.

May Hazlip, of Kansas City, Mo. (above), and Francis Harrel (below) will pilot planes in the National Air Tour which will visit all the principal cities in the United States in the near future.

BEGINS TUESDAY IN COURT BEFORE JURY

The October petit jury convened in Common Pleas Court Tuesday for the trial of the $10,000 damage suit filed by Opal Bowes against The Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Co., recalling a grade crossing accident at Osborn August 22, 1928 in which the plaintiff alleges she was injured permanently. The jury was taken to Osborn Tuesday morning to view the accident scene.

It is the contention of the plaintiff that the auto in which she and her husband, Arthur, and Philip Froikin were riding was demolished by a cut of flat cars which was being backed across the Xenia Drive crossing.

Froikin was demonstrating the car to Mr. and Mrs. Bowes, who were prospective purchasers. Mrs. Bowes claims she was thrown out of the machine, her right side was badly bruised, her right knee injured and that she sustained a cut on the forehead that will leave a permanent scar.

It is charged the crossing was not protected by gates but that the railroad had installed an automatic signal device which failed to function. It is also claimed that Froikin, who was familiar with the crossing relied on the signal device being in proper working order.

TOOK 31 YEARS TO DELIVER CARD

LONDON, O., Oct. 8.—There's a deep, dark postcard mystery at New Holland, near here, which has the authorities guessing today.

A government postcard was included in a pouch of mail which was received here. The card is dated January 29, 1898. It bears both the postmarks of Clarksville and Atlanta on the 1898 date and is addressed to Mrs. Margaret Graham of New Holland.

Clarksville and Atlanta are almost within a day's throw of New Holland and postal authorities are wondering where the card has been for the past thirty-one years.

The mystery is deepened by a third postmark, Mexico, Mo., with an unreadable date in September of this year.

TRAVELOGUE TO BE HEARD BY KIWANIS

The Misses Kate and Julia, Schweibold, who recently returned to their home in this city, after a trip of two months through Germany and other places of interest in Europe, will be guest speakers at the regular weekly meeting of the Xenia Kiwanis Club, at Elks' Hall, Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock.

T. C. Lenz, delegate of the Kiwanis convention at Maclelland last week, will tell of some of the sessions which he attended.

The committee in charge of the programs, for each meeting this month, is composed of the following: J. Carl Marshall, Dr. Austin M. Patterson, Ernest Beatty, the Rev. W. N. Shank and Dr. G. W. Kuhn.

"KONJOLA—THAT'S MY ADVICE TO ALL WHO SUFFER"

Happy Lady Tells How New Medicine Put A Quick End To Liver Trouble and Rheumatism

"I marvel at the powers of this new Konjola," said Mrs. R. Dunbar, Route No. 2, Canton, Ohio. "I find it difficult to believe that two years of suffering from rheumatism has been so quickly and completely ended. For two years I had rheumatic pains all over me, and at times was scarcely able to walk across a room. Then, too, my liver was sluggish and I had frequent dizzy spells. My system was full of impurities.

"A friend suggested that I try Konjola and put it to the test. How this wonderful medicine went to the very source of my troubles was simply astounding. My improvement was immediate, and day by day I became better and stronger. Today, the rheumatic pains and dizzy spells have vanished and I can walk around the house all day without even feeling tired. Konjola—that's my advice to all who suffer, because I know it is a wonderful medicine."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at Gal-lacher drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. Adv.

Sorrow and fear have clutched the hearts and minds of the family of Henry S. Thompson, millionaire Detroit real estate dealer, since the disappearance of his son, Jackie (inset), aged 5. The police are working on the theory that kidnapers took the lad from in front of his home (shown above), and are holding him for ransom.

THEATER GUILD MEMBERSHIP DRIVE LAUNCHED AT MEETING

Final plans for the membership drive for the 1929-30 season of The Little Theater Guild of Xenia, were laid at a meeting of the Guild executive committee in the Probate Court offices in the Court House Monday evening.

The drive will be launched this week and tickets will be in the hands of the executive and the membership committees. Members of the executive committee are: Miss Lorena Paullin, president; Mrs. M. L. Wolf, first vice president; Mrs. Steele Poague, second vice president; Marcus McCallister, third vice president; Miss Faye Cavanaugh, secretary; James Wilson, III, treasurer; Miss Allegra Hawes, membership; I. M. Hyman, properties; Miss Helen Little, costumes; Mrs. Lawrence Shields, play reading and Miss Alice Foley, publicity.

Members of the membership committee are: Miss Allegra Hawes, chairman; Frederick Anderson, Harry Kiernan, Harry A. Higgins, Mrs. J. H. Whitmer, Mrs. Karl R. Babb and Miss Josephine Wolf.

An active campaign will be conducted by the membership committee and memberships will also be received at prominent locations in Xenia, to be announced later.

Two hundred people were members of the Guild last season, the first year of the organization, and it is hoped to obtain 300 members this year. An effort will be made to obtain out-of-town members this season and all Greene County people interested in the Theater Guild's work will be welcomed.

"Tea for Three," a recent Broadway success, is announced as the Guild's first play for this season.

OPPOSES ROAD

Following a recommendation of County Surveyor W. J. Davis that a petition seeking establishment of a public road to be known as the Shepherd Road be denied, County Commissioners have assigned October 16 at 10 a. m. as a date for an adjourned hearing at which the project will be given further consideration.

were appointed as members in charge. John Pulliam and Roland Bice were appointed to take charge of the advertising.

It was also decided to have the next meeting in form of an invitation meeting to initiate the eight new boys to be admitted to the club. John Hurley, Robert Hardy and Joe Smittle were appointed to make arrangements for the initiation. Coach "Pinky" Wilson attended the meeting as a guest and gave an interesting talk on Hi-Y member during his college days and is very much interested in the work of the club at Central. He gave a few short illustrations of the work that is carried on by some clubs. He was elected an honorary member of the club.

After a few more talks and discussion the meeting was adjourned.

NEW BOOKS AT LIBRARY

NON FICTION
Palmer—"Clark of the Ohio."
With the approach of the Lewis and Clark celebration, this book with its unusually valuable picture of Clark and his part in the making of the West should be of unusual interest.
Sandburg—"American Songbag."
A collection of American songs, interesting as revealing one side of the character of the people who made and sang them. Other than the Spanish songs and Negro spirituals, the Songbag may be more a factor in the social history of America than of real musical value. It is an achievement in the collection of song-lore.
Rose—"The Stump Farm."
The hero story of a woman who with her elderly husband and a small son, wins a meager living from the soil of a stump farm in the Northwest, and has the courage to take up a homestead and start all over again so her husband may die in his homeland.
Olyanova—"What Does Your Handwriting Reveal?"
A clever analysis of character through handwriting, illustrated with specimens of the handwriting of well known people.

ism is told as if it were a function of Mussolini's personality. On its literary side, hurriedly dictated though it may be, this book has a recognized place in Italian literature. The account of the march to Rome is superior to any recorded at the time, or since.

Mumford—"Herman Melville".
An interesting interpretation of Herman Melville's life and thought, from his writings, letters and note books. A record, singularly complete in that part of Melville which most matters; his ideas, his feelings and his inspiration.

The authors trace the development of human personality from its origin in nerves and emotions. For the reader who has graduated from popularized psychology, this book reveals at first hand the scientist's discoveries and knowledge of human behavior.

EAST HIGH NOTES

Take "A Trip to Paris," with M. Monplaisir Christophe, at East High School Friday night at 8:15. M. Monplaisir Christophe is a native Frenchman from Valenciennes, France, who is pursuing an education in University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He comes here highly recommended by the University faculty, churches and schools which have been so fortunate as to hear him speak.

His lecture "A Trip to Paris" not only contains some very interesting facts concerning his native country but also gives a number of instructive events of the world war in which he was a participant. He also illustrates this lecture with a series of scenes of Paris and other interesting places in France. Be sure and hear him, Friday, October 11th at 8:15 o'clock.

Complete showing of the season's newest wearing apparel on living models. In connection with the popular picture—"RESTLESS YOUTH" with Marceline Day and Ralph Forbes.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE NOTES

The new year at Cedarville College has opened with the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The freshman class alone shows an increase over last year of almost 60 per cent, and constitutes an unusually fine group.

That the Cedarville product is in demand in the schools of the state is shown by the fact that every member of the last graduating class desiring to teach has obtained a good position. The young people taking the two-year course also are all well located.

The supply of teachers is not equal to the demand, a strong recommendation of the Cedarville product.

New members of the faculty this year number three and are as follows: Miss Norma D. Wood, A. M., professor of romance languages and public speaking, who received her A. B. and B. S. degrees from Ohio State University in 1928 and A. M. degree from Ohio State in 1929; Miss Dorothy Angevine, A. N., professor of Latin and English and dean of women, who received her A. M. degree from Ohio State; and Leroy Davis, A. M., professor of mathematics, registrar and secretary to the president. He is a graduate of Findlay College and of Ohio State University.

The revival at St. John's A. M. E. Church closed Sunday night with one of the greatest meetings of the series. The church was packed and the converts and reclaimants all had special seats in front of the speaker. There were ten converts, nine additions to the church and many reclaimed.

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Wheeler, evangelists, presented the choir with beautiful bouquet of fall flowers mixed with roses and to the pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Fox, a beautiful electric toaster in appreciation of valuable services rendered during the series of meetings. Mrs. Smith preached a very effective sermon on "Na-

The right way to redye Finest Silks

TEXTILE manufacturers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the only way to secure the most perfect results. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home users to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of pure silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the blue package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors, with greater depth and permanence than any "all purpose" dye.

These special Diamond Dyes are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, they contain the highest quality anilines money can buy. That's what makes them go on so smoothly and evenly, without spotting or streaking. That's the secret of their brilliance; their resistance to sunlight, wear and washing.

The white package of Diamond Dye is the highest quality dye prepared for general use. It will dye, or tint, silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon (artificial silk), or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye for silk or wool only—with it you can dye your valuable articles of pure silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. # CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1925, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CHAPTER XLIX

Chatty sat up in her chair, very straight and tall, momentarily sobered. George! There was George—there, there!

She raised a hand to wave it—then drew it back. How did she know who he was with? It couldn't be Billie, at this hour, at this place. "Sure, 'tain't Billie! Poor, poor Billie! So trusting, so good—and that no-count George Mayhew, running around with other girls. But I'll fix him—don't have to keep quiet any more! All I got to do is watch, and see—and then go tell Billie! All right for you, Mr. George Mayhew! Make a date with another girl, will you, and break my poor Billie's heart? Not if I see you—and I do see you!"

When Bryant came Chatty demanded to dance again. She didn't tell him why—that she wanted to see who George Mayhew was with. Bryant might not like that.

But Bryant danced with her, obediently. She danced through all three rooms—but she couldn't locate George Mayhew anywhere. "I know what he's done—he's gotten a private room!" she thought, nodding her head. "Smart Billie! George Mayhew! Well, I'll fix you anyhow. I'll just wait around, and around, and around."

But this Chatty found she couldn't do. It was now long after midnight.

"No, don't want to wait any longer! Liquor here is all run out!" he lied. "Got plenty more at home—come on! That's a good Billie sport!"

Chatty was too far gone in mind and stomach to resist. There was some reason she wanted to stay. Oh, yes to see George and what girl he had with him. Nasty, deceiving George! But after all, what girl didn't matter! Any girl was enough. She'd tell Billie tomorrow! She'd tell all the girls tomorrow! She'd been silent long enough.

"A right!" she hiccupped. "Let's go!"

He led her to the cloak room, paid her tip to the coat girl, took her arm. Very straight, slowly and deliberately they walked out of the lobby; careful to be dignified and very, very sober.

Bryant leaned her carefully against a post while he went for his car.

When he drove up in it, Chatty surprised him by wanting to drive. "No time like this time!" she insisted. "Want to drive car. Want annesser lesson. Don't need a lesson, but want one, anyhow! Isn't that funny? Slide over, old dear, and let me get at the wheel!"

"Sure, sure!" agreed Bryant. "No time like this! Give you the car if you want it. Ain't you going to give me something worth more than a car? Give us a kiss, like a good girl!"

"Stop! Don't want to kiss! Want to drive!" insisted Chatty.

Bryant slid over and Chatty tumbled, rather than climbed, into the driver's seat. Chatty started the car and turned it skillfully into the driveway. As she paused at the gate to wrap her coat around her, a yellow roadster shot by.

She had just a flash of the driver's face—George Mayhew.

"Well, now, do you think you can!" she jeered. "See that car?" she demanded of Bryant.

"Sure I see it! Nice Billie car!" answered Bryant.

"In it is George Mayhew!" cried Chatty. "With a girl!"

"George Mayhew—girl!" repeated Bryant, vacantly.

"Billie! Languan's George Mayhew!" explained Chatty, impatiently. "With a girl! I want to see the girl! You game?"

"Sure—game. Always game! Shoot 'til works!" declared Bryant. "What you going to do?"

"Catch 'em!" snapped Chatty. "Watch my smoke!"

Chatty turned the car into the road and stepped on the gas.

The road sped a lone red light. In front of that red light role George Mayhew and a girl.

Chatty set out to catch them, to see the girl. All the starved, gossip part of her demanded to know what woman took George Mayhew away from Billie Languan. Dear, dear Billie! so good, so kind, so sweet, so decent.

And George Mayhew, taking some girl around to road house in the middle of the night! Doubtless he had been with Billie all evening.

Billie's man was George Mayhew, and he was running around with some girl, and Chatty just had to know who it was!

She stepped harder on the gas! The car flew down the road. It was a good road, and wide. As all motorists know, it is easier to steer a car at speed than when going slowly—provided nothing gets in the way.

Nothing got in the way. "Atta girl!" shrieked Bryant.

"Step on her, baby, and show them her heels. This lil' boat goes faster than any other lil' boat! Give it to her!"

Chatty "gave it to her."

She had had but a few lessons in driving. She had never driven a car more than twenty-five miles an hour in her life. Now the steel monster under her hands throbbed and pulsed with power. The accelerator went down, down, down. The needle on the dial crept up, up, up.

Thirty, thirty-five, forty, forty-five—

"Hold her, girl, hold her!" Bryant looked at her adoringly.

"Some lil' driver!" he yelled. "Catch anything? Catch a flying machine. Catch a balloon! Catch a fish, catch a—catch a George Mayhew!" he ended with a shout.

Fifty, fifty-one, fifty-three, fifty-five—the needle crept slowly, but surely, over the figures. The red light ahead gleamed redder, brighter.

"Get away with it, will you?" demanded Chatty, of no one in particular. "Think you can double-cross my friend? Not on your life."

She took one hand from the wheel to press down the horn button. The car ahead swerved to one side to let her pass. But Chatty did not want to pass. She wanted to see. She slowed up, just enough to keep the two cars level, so she could look at the feminine face next George's shoulder—

The road narrowed. A curve appeared. Chatty had one long, short stare into the girl's eyes—and her mouth fell open in utter surprise. The girl was Billie Languan!

Then a shriek, a yell, a grinding of metal on metal, a locking of fenders and, both cars together, looked in a tight embrace, slid off the road, into the ditch!

Yells of fear, cries of pain, thunderous roars, a flash of lightning, an explosion, a stunning crash—and the lights went out for Chatty.

As the darkness descended and her ocean of pain was blotted out by unconsciousness she cried out.

But it was not Bryant's name that she shrieked in that last moment of conscious life.

The Theater

H. L. Binder, owner and manager of the Orphium Theater, announces that he is installing talkie movie apparatus and will be able to start showing vocaloids November 12 when Warner's "Noah's Ark" will be the first outload.

The Orphium will thus find other features. Although Mr. Hibbert has not announced his bookings, they will probably include Paramount, M.G.M. and Fox pictures.

The Orphium will be silent for a time on Mondays and Fridays, while silent pictures already bought will be run, the talkies being used on the other nights. When the silent pictures are exhausted, talkies will be used for all programs. The talkie apparatus at the Orphium will be tested for a week before the official opening, it is said.

In the meantime work is progressing on the booth being built at the Bijou, made necessary by the talkie installation. While an opening date has not been announced, it is assured that the theater will be ready for the initial showing sometime this month.

Lila Lee's back in the movies again. Fans who have missed her will see her soon in a picture about New York night clubs and such.

of small-town picture houses. It is doubtful if there is another city this size in the state in which all theaters have been equipped with sound apparatus and the condition here bespeaks the progressiveness of Xenia's theater magnates and merits the support of Xenia theatergoers.

One Wilmington theater, the Murphy, was opened Saturday night for talkies, after its management was taken over by Phil Chakares, Springfield theater man. The Murphy was also equipped with new seats. Information from Wilmington says that the theater was not able to accommodate the crowds, Al Jolson's "Say It With Songs" was the opening outflow and Jolson is always big box-office.

Mr. Binder has seen the motion picture industry in Xenia grow from a crude, imperfect thing to its present grandeur. Lots of water has gone through the mill since he deserted the coal business to become a celluloid impresario here, but his present announcement indicates now he has kept pace with progress in the industry.

The installation of talkies is a big step for the Orphium, because it means first class, first-run, high-price pictures for that house. Mr. Binder has booked Warner Bros. offerings, including "The Desert Song", "On With the Show" and

HEARTBREAK OF ITALIAN WHO SOUGHT FAME

GIUSEPPE DI
BENEDETTO

(Editor's Note: This is another of a series of sketches of the most prominent radio artists of the day. Others follow.)

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—They call him "the man who might have been a second Caruso."

To a Neapolitan who loves his music as he loves his life Giuseppe di Benedetto came very near making a "supreme sacrifice," when poison gas and shrapnel "Over There" stilled the bird in his throat for seven months.

Giuseppe was a captain in the Italian army, and it was at Col di Iano that his world fell around him and he was sent to the hospital for months, a pitiful human wreck. The fates gave him back his voice. He is one of the best on the air.

But, Giuseppe had prayed to walk in the footsteps of his beloved countryman, Caruso.

In "Neapolitan Nights" When you hear him in "Neapolitan Nights," perhaps you catch the heartbreak a bit and feel in the poignancy of his tones a little of what he has suffered. But, if you could be in the studio with him and see his ruddy, smiling face as he turns from the "micro" and comes back from his Naples to the everyday studio world, you would find it hard to believe that he carries a cross.

"My 'Felix' now he is eight. Ah, he is the genius! You should hear him play now. Accompanies me like a grown man. Such sympathy, such technique. The twins, my boy and my girl, love music like real Neapolitans, too. We are a happy family."

Sometimes the little di Benedetto gets a fit of pride over their father being an American citizen and are so eager to emphasize it among the neighbor boys that the art of fisticuffs almost gets the upper hand. Papa di Benedetto chuckles a little when he tells of this—and one can't help but believe he might even be able to sit in on a prize fight without having his artistic soul pained too much by the sight of manly combat.

And, what a blow this must be

Fancy! For this he surely should have a medal. He must be the first who can be classed with the artists to admit such a dreadful streak of hot polloi.

"It is wonderfully refreshing—jazz," he admits, without a shiver. "It is my honest opinion that, oh, so many what you call high-hat people secretly tune in on a jazz orchestra when no one is listening. There is no danger of it ruining the world—for a few years yet, at least, I expect to be able to survive it."

Giuseppe di Benedetto is one of the most colorful personalities on the air when he broadcasts. He stands back a short distance from the mike, head thrown back and eyes closed, and seems to be trying to send his entire self out with his golden voice.

Near him is Joe Biviano, slender dark-eyed Italian, with his accordion swung around his shoulders on a brilliant green strap. Joe was discovered, a poor unknown, playing for nickels and dimes on a Staten Island ferry. Dark, sloe-eyed Neapolitan girl songbirds give the setting an atmosphere so foreign that it seems to be a bit of Italy itself.

TWAIN WILLING TO DIVIDE HIS PART

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 8.—Mark Twain confessed a tremendous appetite in a letter recently loaned to the Missouri Historical Society here. In declining an invitation to dinner at the home of P. D. Pelletier, Twain wrote:

"Mean time will you kindly see that the portion of your banquet which I should be allowed to consume, if I were present, is equitably distributed among the public charities of our several states and territories? I would not want any partiality shown; on account of political creed or geographical position, but would beg that all the crates be of the same heft."

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

The grand row over the new tariff on sugar is now in earnest in Washington, and I do not look for any let-up for at least six more weeks.

At the end of some unknown period of time a sugar tariff schedule of some sort will have been hammered through the senate and house of representatives, and then, for the first time, the farm interests of the country will know "where they are at."

Although past history should have been sufficient warning, to be sure, I have been somewhat surprised at the intensity of the protest on the proposed new duties.

The Cuban sugar interests are very active, of course, and newspaper and magazine editorial offices are bombarded with eloquent and almost fearful protests at the terrible injustice of wrecking the Cuban sugar market in this country.

I do not say that these protests are not entirely proper, and entirely sincere. Although it must always be remembered that the sugar plantations and mills in Cuba are owned chiefly by New York capital. Undoubtedly a depression in the sugar business is a serious thing for the people and government of Cuba.

But the farming interests of the United States are inclined to look at the problem with an un sentimental eye. They have not the least desire to take the food out of the mouth of the Cuban child; but they look at the 16,000,000 acres of the best farm land, that would be needed to grow sugar beets if we did not import raw cane sugar from Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii and elsewhere.

They would like to see that land used for sugar, and thus withdrawn from its present production of farm crops, so as to reduce the oversupply of many things that depresses the prices thereof.

If some other method could be devised for taking that 16,000,000 acres from its present use, and turning it to some profitable new crop, sugar or anything else, it would be equally satisfactory to farmers, no doubt.

They are not fighting Cuban sugar and Cuban citizens; they are fighting their own overproduction of such things as potatoes, oats, and wheat.

All these factors and many others are involved in the grand Washington sugar fight, and just how it will come out is something no one can tell, not even Senator Smoot or the president himself.

And when the treaties came up for ratification they were most savagely fought and bitterly criticized.

As successful, however, as Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald have been in resolving Anglo-American problems, there are still danger points in the forthcoming parley, chiefly the attitude of France and Italy. The tone of the French press already is critical, if not actually hostile.

It was with this in mind that the British premier spoke to the senate so emphatically in opposition to any alliance, and it is because of this that President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson lost no opportunity to emphasize that

Wise legislation has halted the ancient prejudice that dictated the exploitation of child labor for selfish gain. Guided by AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE it has routed greed. No longer are little children forced into slavery.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

PREMIER FURTHERS PARITY

MAG DONALD SPEECH TO SENATE ASSISTS FRIENDLY ATTITUDE

Opposes Alliance But Emphasizes General Peace

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — A distinguished diplomat who has observed the ebb and flow of world politics in many quarters of the globe said today:

"The British captured Washington in 1814 after long and bloody fighting; it has remained for a pacifist prime minister of Great Britain to do it one hundred and fifteen years later without the firing of a single shot."

Behind this somewhat waggish observation lay a sincere and eloquent tribute to R. Ramsay MacDonald, the square-built, self-made Scotsman, whose ruling passion is world peace; whose dream is a partnership of the English-speaking peoples to maintain it, and who, in the brief space of four days' intimate contact with American officials, has probably done more to accomplish it than any gold-brained diplomat in history.

Without the services of experts or the trappings of formal diplomatic intercourse, without much of anything, in fact, save an earnest, almost evangelic, profession of friendly equality, the British premier undoubtedly has accomplished in Washington the full significance of which may not be fully realized for years. At the very lowest estimate he has brushed away international cobwebs that no amount of ordinary diplomatic intercourse could have done.

And as a result, Great Britain and the United States go into the forthcoming naval conference in January on a basis of friendly equality and earnest co-operation toward the goal of reducing armaments throughout the world. It is a long way from the ill-starred Geneva naval conference two years ago when British-American differences broke up the conference and drove a cleft between London and Washington that has remained unbridged to this day.

The crowning touch of MacDonald's pilgrimage to Washington was not when he sat on a log with President Hoover in the fastness of the Virginia mountains and discussed his cherished dream of a partnership between the English-speaking peoples to maintain peace throughout the world—important as that event was.

The climax was reached when a British prime minister for the first time in history faced the American senate in session, the senate that jealously protects its prerogatives in international affairs, the senate that broke the heart of Woodrow Wilson, and exclaimed:

"Parity? Take it—without reserve, heaped up and flowing over."

From any other British statesman perhaps, certainly from a Lord Balfour or a Stanley Baldwin, such a profession undoubtedly would have been taken with a grain of salt, or been interpreted as a pretty and meaningless gesture.

But behind the British prime minister who stood on the rostrum there, most senators discerned also the first laborer ever to reach the pinnacle of the premiership, a man sprung from low estate, and a man whose aversion to war and militarism in 1914-1918 almost made him a pariah in his own country, his name hissed, and his company avoided. Whatever it was, the senate unquestionably took his professions at their face value, and the chandeliers rattled with applause.

It was a stirring and never-to-be-forgotten spectacle—this appearance of a British prime minister before the senate, fresh from conference with the president of the United States, in which they between them, received the contentious points that had stood in the way of the actual calling of another disarmament conference.

Even the cautious Borah, who is now endeavoring to make up his mind whether he can go to the London conference as one of the American delegates, was moved to describe it as a most happy occasion, and a most happy speech.

The rest of the comment from senators ran the scale of enthusiastic approval.

This one act of MacDonald's in addressing the senate and act which incidentally had been discussed with President Hoover beforehand—probably will have a far-reaching effect, for it is this same senate that will be called upon to ratify whatever treaties emerge from the London conference.

HEADS CAMPAIGN

EDWIN GALLOWAY

JURY SELECTED TO HEAR FALL BRIBERY CHARGE IN CAPITAL

Four Women, Eight Men Sitting In Oil Lease Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Washington's favorite drama, running intermittently now for the last six years, took the stage again today at district supreme court as the bribery trial of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall actually got under way.

The jury before which it will be unfolded has been selected, and to make sure that nothing distracts their attention from the words of the actors as spoken in the courtroom, and those words alone, they will remain "locked up" for the duration of the case.

Today, the plot will be outlined to them. It is still the same as to when the senate uncovered the oil scandals of the Harding administration back in 1923, but it is still just as serviceable as ever, to wit:

Was the $100,000 in the "little black box" that passed from E. L. Doheny, the oil baron, to Fall a bribe to enable procurement of a lease on the naval oil reserves, or was it just an unsecured note from "one old friend to another?"

The mixed jury—there are four women and eight men, one of the latter a Negro—will hear from Owen J. Roberts, the special oil prosecutor, a most emphatic statement that it was an outright bribe, evidence of which every effort was made to conceal, and just as eloquently Frank J. Hogan, chief defense counsel, will assure them it was a loan made on the basis of friendship, and that back in the old days when the two men prospered together in the then wild West.

SELF DEFENSE PLEA TO BE HOUSEMAID'S HOPE OF ACQUITTAL

Tentative Jury Is Selected For Murder Trial

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—In a claim of self-defense lay the sole hope of freedom today for Mrs. Anna Szeman, 38-year-old housemaid, charged with the murder of her employer, Mrs. Dorothy M. Snyder, as her trial entered its second day.

Twelve jurors were tentatively selected yesterday to decide whether Mrs. Szeman is guilty of first degree murder. Following completion of the jury today, the prosecution was scheduled to make its opening arguments telling that it expects to prove the housemaid killed her mistress with "malice and premeditation"—the penalty for which is death in the electric chair.

A double defense was placed by H. E. Varga, Hungarian consul, who is counsel for Mrs. Szeman. One was a defense of insanity and the other that of self defense, based on Mrs. Szeman's assertion that her mistress had at first attacked her with a knife.

ALBANY BASEBALL POOL UNDER FIRE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—District Attorney Clarence Unckless of Onondaga County today declared he would move to indict the alleged operators of the Albany baseball pool whose names, he said, are known to the police.

A secret investigation was instituted when William Kirkpatrick of Syracuse complained he had been refused payment of a $15,000 prize. Agents here and in Rochester, Elmira, Utica and Little Falls have been taken into custody.

EDWIN GALLOWAY MADE GENERAL CHAIRMAN OF 1930 CHEST CAMPAIGN

Will Conduct Drive In Late November Is Announced

Edwin Galloway, prominent Xenia furniture dealer, was appointed general chairman of the second annual Xenia Community Chest drive for 1930 to be conducted the latter part of November at a meeting of the chest executive committee Monday. Definite dates for the campaign have not been fixed.

In consenting to assume the responsibility of taking charge of the campaign, Mr. Galloway succeeds to the position held last year by City Auditor T. H. Zell, who successfully directed the first drive "over the top."

Last year eight Xenia charitable organizations benefited by the chest campaign. They were: Social Service League, Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Federated P. T. A., Xenia Garden Club, Xenia Recreation Association, Greene County Health League and the East Side P. T. A.

These institutional members of the chest organization, together with any other organized group or agency, public or private, which desire to participate in the coming drive, have been invited to submit their 1930 budgets not later than October 15 to L. M. Hyman, secretary of the executive committee.

The aggregate total of the budgets received will constitute the approximate goal of the chest campaign, but the budget committee is the final authority on what amount is to be distributed to each agency.

For the drive this fall the personnel of the board of directors and the executive committee which served last year will remain the same, it is announced.

A constitution for the chest organization was drawn up and adopted some time ago but will not be placed in effect until next year. In letters addressed to Xenia welfare organizations expected to participate in the chest drive, Secretary Hyman declared: "The chest drive of 1930 will soon get underway. The executive committee has been at work devising plans to make this year's drive a success. The committee feels that it proved to the public last year that the community chest is the best method for raising funds for charity work in the city. Last year the chest was something new and the public responded. It is hoped that the response will be similarly generous this year."

It is explained that the primary objects of the chest are to strengthen and make socially efficient the spirit of human helpfulness in Xenia; to afford the citizens the opportunity to contribute to welfare work through a community chest; to co-ordinate the work of the charitable, civic and philanthropic and benevolent organizations of Xenia and vicinity; to promote co-operation, efficiency and economy in their operations; and to prevent as much as possible the overlapping of efforts.

MAYOR SENTENCES OPPONENT

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 8.—Mayor F. C. Johnson, a Republican, today is credited with drawing first blood in the election campaign against his Democratic opponent, T. M. Henderson.

The incumbent mayor was favored by fate.

Henderson was arrested for driving an automobile while intoxicated. He was arraigned before Mayor Johnson and pleaded guilty.

Mayor Johnson fined the Democratic candidate $100 and costs and deprived him of his driving rights for six months.

The city official also passed a thirty-day jail sentence against Henderson, but suspended it.

And the sweetest part of the victory, according to Johnson, is the fact that there was no exertion on his part.

"ARMED TRUCE" IN SOCIAL WAR

Dolly Gann Yields To Mrs. Howard For Dinner

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—An armed truce prevailed in social Washington today following the most brilliant function since Queen Marie of Roumania's visit some years ago at the White House.

Although at the state dinner given by President and Mrs. Hoover in honor of Prime Minister MacDonald and his daughter, Isobel, there was apparent harmony after Mrs. Edward E. Gann had accepted a seat on the left of the president in favor of Lady Isabella Howard, wife of the British ambassador. It was freely predicted that the Curtis-Gann-Alice Longworth war would be resumed during the winter.

Mrs. Longworth, daughter of a president and wife of the speaker of the house, returned to the capital at 10:30 o'clock last night, purposely delaying her arrival beyond the hour set for the Hoover dinner.

"Will you attend the dinner at Prime Minister MacDonald at the British embassy," she was asked.

"I don't know. I have not yet opened my mail," was the reply.

Miss Isobel MacDonald was seated beside James O. McReynolds, associate justice of the supreme court, and referred to as "Washington's most eligible bachelor."

The seating arrangement, held secret until today, revealed that although Vice-President Curtis waived all rights of second ranking lady for his half-sister and official hostess, Mrs. Gann, in favor of Lady Isabella, he himself, did not relinquish his social rank to the British ambassador.

Following is how the ranking guests were seated:

At the president's right: Lady Isabella Howard; Secretary of State Stimson; Miss Isobel MacDonald; Justice J. C. McReynolds.

At Mrs. Hoover's right: Vice-President Curtis; Mrs. Vincent Massey (wife of the Canadian minister).

By consent of Vice-President Curtis, Lady Isabella Howard was taken in by the president, and Mrs. Gann by Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador. Curtis escorted Mrs. Hoover, and Secretary of State Stimson took in Miss Isobel. The Chief Justice and Mrs. W. H. Taft had been invited but declined as they do not go out in the evening.

That, together with the declaration of Speaker and Mrs. Longworth simplified somewhat President Hoover's problem. But the fact remains that "Princess Alice" has determined not to accept any invitations during the winter where "Dolly" Gann will be seated above her.

One phase of the controversy raging around Mrs. Gann which the state department's protocol division apparently overlooked with regard to her social status was that Secretary of State Stimson himself has made a secure when she shall sit at American functions.

Until now "Dolly" was only assured first place at the home of diplomats by grace of the decision announced by Sir Esme Howard.

Stimson announced a hands off policy. But the vice president did some fast thinking. He formally notified Stimson that he waived his step-sister's "rights" to precedence solely for the Hoover dinner. Stimson announced it.

The vice president's own words, and according to the social arbiters, thereby put the official stamp of approval of the Curtis-Gann contentions.

Almost a week passed before the matter was cleared up and the Chinese authorities learned that the Chinese aviators, Costes and Bellonte were then permitted to proceed to Tsitsihar.

The fliers are awaiting a new fuel supply before taking off to Tokyo.

PROBE OF CULT STIRS WEST COAST

Mrs. May O. Blackburn, 48, and her daughter, Ruth Welland, 22, leaders of a Los Angeles religious cult, have been placed under arrest on charges of grand fraud while police investigate the death, four years ago, of Willa Rhoads, 16-year-old priestess of the cult, whose body has been found under the residence of her foster parents, and the mysterious disappearance of two other women. The fraud charges have resulted from the complaint of a wealthy oil man who alleges Mrs. Blackburn and her daughter obtained $40,000 from him in connection with a book, "The Sixth Seal," that was to be written by Mrs. Blackburn. According to the girl's foster parents she was to be resurrected with the completion of the book. Both Mrs. Blackburn and her daughter have denied the charges, saying that they did not promise resurrection.

LOBBY INVESTIGATION STEALS SPOTLIGHT FROM NEW TARIFF

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The senate's sweeping inquiry into activities of congressional lobbyists today threatened to steal the spotlight of Capitol Hill from the tedious warfare over the new Republican tariff bill.

A program of procedure for the lobby investigation will be adopted this week, possibly today, by the newly-named committee of Senators Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas

chairman; Borah, Republican, Idaho; Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin; Robinson, Republican, Indiana and Walsh, Democrat, Montana. The investigation will start with the tariff lobby, so that while the senate debates the bill, the country will be treated to an "inside picture" as to how the rates were fixed.

"We intend to give the country a cross-section of lobby activities," said Caraway. "We will show the American people just how a lobby gets and just what it does. That will be my purpose in this inquiry. We will go after the lobbies, large or small, that have scandalously affixed themselves like parasites on the body of congress. These pernicious organizations must be driven out of Washington."

While great interest centered on the lobby inquiry, the senate continued debating administrative features of the new bill with administration leaders hoping to reach the rate schedules later in the week. They were ready for their next great political test—namely, the Thomas motion to recommit the whole bill to the senate finance committee with instructions to eliminate all increases in industrial rates.

PRIME MINISTER IS EMBASSY GUEST FOR DURATION OF VISIT

Leaves White House As Official Work Is Finished

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The purpose of his peace pilgrimage accomplished, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, today had concluded his official conversations with President Hoover and returned to the British embassy from the White House where he had been the guest of the chief executive.

From now until the MacDonald party leaves for Philadelphia next Thursday, the visit of the premier will be mainly social.

As far as the eye and the ear of the outside observer could discern, the mission of the labor premier has been crowned with success.

The United States today accepted the invitation from the London foreign office for a five-nation naval disarmament conference in the British capital next January.

While the official American acceptance and those of France, Italy and Japan have not been officially announced, the matter was considered merely a question of diplomatic transmission.

An impetus toward a favorable atmosphere at the disarmament round table was contributed by the prime minister's dramatic address to the American senate in which he promised parity in naval armaments between Great Britain and the United States.

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 8.—Howard Ehmke pitched the Philadelphia Athletics, American League flia winners, to a 3 to 1 victory over Wrigley's Chicago gunners in the opening game of the world series classic here this afternoon, making the Mackmen one up on the Cubs.

Ehmke was in great form and struck out twelve batters at one time fanning five in a row. For six innings the game was a great pitcher's battle between Ehmke and Charlie Root, pride of Middletown, who started on the hill for the Cubs. Neither team could cross the plate for six frames but in the first of the seventh, with one down, Fox, Athletic first-baseman, broke the ice when he knocked a home run far over the center field barrier with the bases empty.

Philadelphia added two runs in the ninth on two errors and as many hits. Ehmke was deprived of a shutout when an error by Dykes paved the way for the lone Chicago run in the last of the ninth. A single by Stephenson drove in the Cubs' only tally. The crowd numbered 51,800.

FIRST INNING

Philadelphia—Bishop grounded out to Grimm, unassisted. Haas struck out. Cochrane walked. Simmons fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—McMillan fouled out to Cochrane directly behind the plate. English singled, the ball being deflected off Ehmke's glove. Miller raced back to the fence for Hornsbey's long drive, holding English on first. Miller also took Wilson's high fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

SECOND INNING

Philadelphia—Fox hit sharply to left for a single. Miller fanned swinging. Dykes singled between short and third. Fox stopping at second. Boley hit into a fast double play, English to Hornsbey to Grimm. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Chicago—With the count three and two, Cuyler struck out. Stephenson was called out on strikes. Grimm lined a single to center. Taylor popped to Fox. No runs, one hit, no errors.

THIRD INNING

Philadelphia—Ehmke raised an infield fly to McMillan. Bishop out on a liner to English. Haas received a base on balls. A grounder by Cochrane hit McMillan in the shoulder but the third-sacker picked it up and threw him out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Root struck out. McMillan singled over second. English doubled to right field, sending McMillan to third. Ehmke fanned Hornsbey. Wilson also struck out, swinging. No runs, two hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING

Philadelphia—Simmons lifted to Stephenson. Fox grounded out Hornsbey to Grimm. Hornsbey also threw out Miller. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Cuyler fanned for the second time. Dykes robbed Stephenson for an apparent hit with a sensational diving catch of his liner. He made the catch with his gloved hand while sliding along the ground. Grimm walked. Grimm out stealing. Cochrane to Bishop. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FIFTH INNING

Philadelphia—Dykes struck out. So did Boley. Stephenson took Ehmke's fly on the foul line. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Chicago—Simmons leaned over almost into the left field stands to make a fine one-handed catch of a line drive.

Before Women's Clubs

MISS Helen Hooven Santmyer, Xenia writer, will be one of the principal speakers at the middle north district conference of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs at Sidney, October 15 and 16.

Nearly three hundred women representing five city federations and seventy-three individual clubs in twelve counties, are expected to attend the conference. The program is being arranged by Mrs. B. W. Jones, Troy, district president.

The Lal Bach Missionary Society of Trinity M. E. Church held its first regular monthly meeting, of the new conference year Monday evening at the church, with an interesting program given by the Children's Missionary Society, of the church.

The children's program was under the direction of Mrs. George Street and opened by the children singing "Builders All." This was followed by stories given by George, Elleen Beatty and Mildred Leveck who told of the happiness given them by the missions in Africa.

Little Jimmy Stout read the story "Work and Play of the Boys and Girls of Africa" followed by a story of "How the Japanese Clean House" by Robert Leveck.

Little Rachel Bell, dressed as a Japanese girl, explained "What it Means to be a Girl in Japan." "The Holy Man of India" was read by Marie Truesdale. The children closed their program by singing two songs.

During the business session, Mrs. William Wilson, chairman, gave a short report of the box which was sent to the African mission school, for the Christmas party. Mrs. F. C. Bishop was appointed by the chairman to buy and send to another school in Africa, embroidery patterns on which the children like to work.

Mrs. Ernest Beatty, chairman of the membership committee, reported three new members: Mrs. Bert Conklin, Mrs. M. C. Smith and Mrs. Paul Barger.

Mrs. Marjorie McGarey Wilson, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Street at the piano, sang several vocal numbers. Two readings were given by Little Jean Conklin, student of Mrs. Schick, (Esther Smith).

Mrs. Harold Owens and Mrs. William Wilson were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Dayton district to be held at the St. Paul M. E. Church in Dayton, October 11. Mrs. Theall White was appointed alternate.

"Saved for Service" was the topic chosen by Mrs. George Bootes, who had charge of the devotionals of the day.

Mrs. George Eckerle of Jamestown and Mrs. Marjorie McGarey Wilson were the only out of town guests present at the meeting.

The hostesses, who were Mrs. Clara Reutinger, Mrs. J. A. Beatty, Mrs. Edward Hunt, Mrs. George White, Mrs. Lynn Johnson, Mrs. George Bootes, Mrs. Martha Adams and Miss Wella Shipley, served a dainty refreshment course at the close of the meeting.

FRAUD ALLEGED IN ATTEMPT TO CANCEL DEED; COURT NEWS

Alleging that the defendants, through fraud, induced his grandfather, the late Alexander Morgan, to execute to them a deed for real estate owned by him in Xenia, Elmer M. Thomas has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against Cordelia Berry and Fred D. Berry, seeking cancellation of the deed.

The conveyance of the property took place August 3, 1927 but his grandfather reserved for himself a life estate in the property, according to the plaintiff.

It is charged the Berrys paid him no consideration but agreed to furnish him with a good home and care for him the remainder of his life. Instead of doing this they took him to their home in Chicago, Ill., cared for him a while and then committed him to Hines Hospital in Chicago, the plaintiff asserts. He died in September, 1929.

It is also claimed that on the same date the deed was transferred the defendants persuaded Morgan to mortgage the property for $352 with the Peoples Building and Savings Co., Xenia, named co-defendant in the action, and that they took this money with them to Chicago.

According to the petition, Morgan was drawing $75 a month as pension money, was 82 years of age, was in feeble mind and was mentally unable to transact business, but that the defendants took advantage of his infirmities, also taking his pension money.

The plaintiff represents himself as the sole heir of his grandfather and asks that the deed be set aside. Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

GIVEN DIVORCE

On grounds of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty, Sylvia Calvert has been awarded a divorce from Howard Calvert in Common Pleas Court. The plaintiff was ordered restored to her maiden name of Neff.

GIRL FROM AUTO IS SENTENCED

As an outgrowth of an argument with two Columbus girls whom he was driving to Dayton which resulted in one of the girls jumping or being pushed from the auto at Cedarville Sunday night, Harry Sharpin, 35, Selma, was fined $100 and costs and had his driving rights suspended for six months when arraigned before A. E. Richards, Cedarville Twp. Justice of the peace, on a charge of operating an auto while intoxicated, Monday.

Sharpin pleaded guilty. He is being held at the Cedarville jail and will be transferred to the County Jail unless he arranges to pay the assessment, according to H. A. McLean, village marshal.

Sharpin told the marshal that he is employed in Columbus and that he was driving Audrey Vernon, 30, and her sister, Dorothy, 25, both of Columbus, to Dayton, where they intended to seek employment, meanwhile staying with their brother.

Audrey was riding in the front seat with Sharpin, and her sister in the rear.

Climaxing an argument when the auto reached Cedarville Audrey became angry and ordered him to allow her to get out of the car and take a taxi to Dayton, Sharpin said. Sharpin told the marshal that he slowed the car down but before it stopped the girl jumped out of the machine, fell and was slightly injured. The girl's sister corroborated Sharpin's statement.

Sharpin drove on without stopping. Meanwhile Marshal McLean was notified and Xenia police stopped the car when it reached Xenia. Sharpin was returned to Cedarville.

The girl, however, gave a different version of the affair, asserting Sharpin pushed her out of the machine.

According to Marshal McLean, the trio had been drinking. A charge was filed against Sharpin, who permitted the girls to drive his car back to Columbus Monday.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE MIGHTY GOD — For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.—Luke 1:49.

THE MERCY OF GOD — His mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.—Luke 1:50.

GUSTAV STRESEMANN

The sudden dropping of Gustav Stresemann in the harness of public life is a reminder that the world still produces men willing to sacrifice themselves for their countries as well in peace as in war. The progressive decline of his health under the load of responsibility he was carrying was reported by the correspondents. Stresemann voluntarily submitted to slow death on the altar of national duty.

The political genius of this statesman who twice became chancellor of the German republic and five times its foreign minister was revealed in his early sensing the potentialities of the democratic spirit revived in Germany by the war, as well as in the ability he subsequently displayed in guiding it into orderly and constructive channels of expression. This was not an easy task. Abroad he had to contend with the still smoldering enmities lighted by the war, which reached their bitterest and most provocation length in France, where the conciliatory Aristide Briand was but a weak brake on the fire-eating Poincare. At home he had to defend his policies against the attacks of a strong, although slowly diminishing reactionary element, which interpreted every step he took to ameliorate the condition in which the war had left his country as a surrender to its former enemies.

Stresemann realized that Germany was in a position where she had to give way. We fancy that he realized, too, that if she persists in the ways of patience and industry that he counseled, she will eventually again come into her own. Gustav Stresemann's patriotism was based on a full appreciation of the realities of national and international politics. There was nothing chauvinistic about it. Germany loses in him a bulwark of the policy of conciliation, which has done much to regain for her the friendship of her late enemies.

The dominant role he played in the recent reparations negotiations which remain to be ratified, as well as the strength his genius for compromise gave to the present German government, will make his death all the more keenly felt. Whether Germany has a second Stresemann to step into the shoes of the first remains to be seen. Opportunity again may produce the man. At least the German republic is in a better position today to accept the blow than it was before Stresemann became the outstanding architect of its destiny. The stones that he worked into its foundation, at the cost of his life, will be his monument.

FOR CONGRESSMEN

Assistant Secretary Lowman defends the restoration of the courtesy-of-the-port privilege to congressmen returning from pleasure trips abroad by the following syllogism: A high government official is entitled to the courtesy of the port. A congressman is a high government official. A congressman is therefore entitled to the courtesy of the port.

The conclusion to which this syllogism has brought the treasury department is voided by a defective minor premise. We submit in rebuttal: Constitutionally a congressman is a high government official only when he is in attendance at a session of congress or traveling to or from such a session. A congressman is not above the constitution. A congressman returning from a pleasure trip abroad is therefore without any claim whatsoever to treatment as a high government official, at a port of entry or anywhere else.

The treasury department issued an order on June 1, withdrawing from congressmen the privilege of having the inspection of their baggage expedited. The rescission of that order would seem to invite the senate to add to its inquisitorial agenda an investigation of the real cause of this volte face.

NEW YORK.—Maybe you're a statistician to whom a bunch of figures carry an appeal, all their own. If so, inhale the following:

New York's 18,000 Boys in Blue have the colossal task of safeguarding a daylight population of eight million souls.

"Souls" is a good word.

There are also 30,001 speak-easies running day and night in town besides safeguarding the eight million "souls" some of The Boys have to do their own collecting from the Beer Barons.

It ain't right, Grover. It ain't right!

AN EX-COP SPEAKS

"I been a po-liseman all my life," says former Commissioner Richard Enright, running for mayor on the "Square Deal" ticket. "You can write this down in your little book. If this is a speaky speaky book, an' said cop don't close

SPEAKING OF JOKES

Speaking of great men: There's your college chum, Tom Masson, one-time editor of Life, until Charles Dana Gibson came along and took all the color out of the glad rag. After he quit Life, Tom sat around the chateau in Montclair, banging the little elkskin for a book or two a year, and finally feeling in need of a rest, took over the joke page on the Saturday Evening Post.

Recently Tom wrote a magazine article in which he set out to show that Americans have no sense of humor. And to prove that Tom knew what he was talking about, George Horace Lorimer, Pooh Bah of The Post, took exception to the yarn, an' now Tommy ain't edum

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

AS TO ANCESTORS

We owe a lot to our ancestors. There is, of course, more in heredity than in environment. But there is such a thing as riding on the oars of ancestry and getting nowhere. We should be grateful for the inheritance of a strong constitution, for the bequest of ideals, and for any habit of thoughtfulness that may come naturally to us. But a long time ago it was well said that the man who has not anything to boast of but his illustrious ancestors is like a potato—the only good belonging to him is the underground.

Ancestry, no matter how good, is something to spring from and not to stay with.

IN THE HEART OF FOLKS

Hearing news of new laws in Russia one begins to think the men at the head of the government there—some of whom are very able men—may have something to teach the rest of the nations. Travelers tell of regulations that might be good for the United States. And then comes a new law out of Moscow which exposes the government as hopelessly dumb in spots. One learns from the dispatches that a new edict has abolished the celebration of Christmas and all other religious holidays. But Christmas can't be touched by man-made rules. Christmas lives imperishably in the heart of folks.

$7,000,000 INSURANCE

Pierre S. DuPont, Wilmington, Delaware, believes in life insurance. He carries policies for $7,000,000. John Willis believes in it, too. He carries a little under two million. Schenck, Lasky and Zukor, in the motion picture and theatre business, carry $5,000,000 each. The fact is there are more than 300 American business men and others who carry a million or more. Some bays says insurance does not pay dividends enough. That's worth looking into. There must be some reason for the fact that the most successful and hard-headed business men are usually the ones with the largest insurance policies.

Authority to the Interstate Commerce commission to regulate interstate air commerce in order to stabilize that industry is proposed in a bill I have just introduced in the house.

The purpose of the bill is to stabilize the industry which has enjoyed the most spectacular development of any country has ever witnessed—I mean commercial aviation.

This phenomenal development surpasses the hopes of the most optimistic pioneers. The future of commercial aviation is bright; its brightness attracts. Each month new transportation and manufacturing companies are organized. Competition is keener, and will become keener still.

Competition is stimulative, if not too sharp; but it becomes destructive, if cut-throat methods are allowed to creep in. Protection and encouragement of infant industry is, and long has been, a policy of the American government, and the protection offered by this new bill is consistent with that policy.

Most of the states, feeling that air commerce needs as much regulation as motor bus commerce, have enacted laws to that end. But such laws are inadequate; air commerce is for the most part, interstate, and state boundaries mean as little to an air pilot as county lines mean to a motor bus driver. Adequate protection and regulation can be provided by the federal government alone.

I have sensed a need of uniform regulation by the federal government and have, for that reason, provided in this bill that the Interstate Commerce commission shall have the power to regulate interstate air commerce.

Transportation companies must maintain equipment that will assure the traveling public of safety, or else forfeit their operating privileges. If one company gives satisfactory service between two termini, it alone will be granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity, and another may not operate over that route. Rate-fixing by the commission will prevent exploitation of the public, and yet assure the operator of a reasonable income.

The protection provided by certificates of public convenience and necessity should serve the best interest of the public and, at the same time, encourage the development of commercial aviation.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

All over the world, except, perhaps, in remote regions of South Africa and Siberia, Tempo is the topic of the day. On the continent and in America the twentieth century is acclaimed the speed age—but all other countries concede that America has out-temped all the others.

While leisurely ladies and gentlemen sip melange under the Arcade on the Champs Elysee, or Unter den Linden, they talk of wild America, where leisure is an unknown quantity; where men dash about making fortunes on the stock exchange, and where women tear from one social engagement to another, not even spending enough time to protect and preserve their loveliness.

When a gorgeously gowned, slenderly beautiful American woman appears at the Folies Bergere, the French women raise their fans and whisper, "Yes, she is exquisite, but in ten years—what then? She has no time to care for her beauty!"

And yet the truth of the matter is, the rich American woman spends more money in unbelievably luxurious, leisurely treatments than any other woman in the world. The New York beauty salon is her Mecca. She takes one treatment for $25, or perhaps pays hundreds of dollars to contract for two treatments a week over a period of a year. When she is ready to sail to Europe, she takes with her hundreds of dollars' worth of beauty creams and lotions in exquisite traveling boxes designed just for this purpose. No sooner is Paris reached than she calls at the Parisian home of her favorite beauty specialist, and so on from Paris to Rome, to Vienna to London. Always she finds her rendezvous with beauty.

At no time in history, nowhere else in the world, is there such an exactitude of standard of beauty as in New York. Morning must bring with it a scented soap, delightful bath salts, and exquisitely light fragrance to harmonize with the delicate mood of early morning. Luncheon may mean another perfume, a special lipstick, a subtle rouge. If the costume is to be blue, then the make-up to go with it must blend. At night the American woman discloses the exotic in her nature. She uses dark eye powders, or those tinted with mauve or green to bring out mysterious lights in the eyes. Her lipstick is often daintily vibrant.

The rich American woman of today is chameleon in her devotion to beauty. However, she does not confine herself to color alone; but is equally changeable because of her mood, the time of the day, or because of the nature of the occasion.

him; Washington is municipally bossless.

Serene in the knowledge of the White House's approval (if accorded to him without a single string on it), the general's only other consideration need be congress, when in session—which it frequently is not for nine months at a time—and which, even in session, is an exceedingly slow-moving body—besides being politically dry by a huge majority.

The ideal moment to hand his commission to General Butler would be right after the lawmakers' spring adjournment—thus guaranteeing him hard work to a year of uninterfered-with activity.

Then the fun could begin—as it would, it's ten to one betting. The devil dog veteran's initial difficulty in Philadelphia arose from his ambition to make prohibition as airtight for the Quaker City's aristocracy as for its lowly and humble.

Had he confined himself to raiding cheap bootleggers all would have been well—but when he started breaking into good society, believe me, good society resented it. In fact, it put the skids under the general as speedily as it was able, which was pretty speedily.

Now, the beauty of the situation is that, for every one high muck-a-wuck in Philadelphia, there are a whole city blocks of them in Washington.

Smed Butler would have regular palaces to raid in this town, by the hundred. He would have a convention or two a week to raid in this burg, compared with only two or three times a year in Philadelphia. The folk he caught here would be national reputations instead of mere state-wide fame, as in Philly.

The district is so small, too, and its boundaries are so sharply defined that the general could police it as thoroughly as he polices the marines' reservations at Quantico.

Licker could be stopped from coming in, all right, after a dozen or twenty runners had been interred alongside the highways entering it from Maryland and Virginia—and Smed Butler is a crusader accustomed to the use of firearms.

Senator Howell wants the ban slapped onto embassy booze. It would add to the enjoyment of the situation, certainly. However, it would not make much real difference. Leaks from the embassies and legations are hardly worth speaking of. Besides, the general could cork even them up for embassy licker becomes as contraband as any other kind the minute it overflows diplomatic premises.

Folk who never have dwelt in the District of Columbia probably hardly realize the absoluteness of the despotism which governs it.

Czarist Russia at least had a Russian czar—presumably with a modicum of sympathy for his fellow Russians, as himself a Russian. The district's czarism is more potent than ever Russia's was, because the district is only a twentieth the size of Rhode Island and thus can be bossed in the minutest detail—and its ruler-ship is wholly alien.

Public opinion in Washington signifies nothing to its government.

Its government is responsible exclusively to the rest of the country—to Aroostook county (Me.), Brownsville (Tex.) and Woodburn township (Ore.)—and the rest of the country not only cares not a hoot what Washingtonians want; it simply loves to see their civilization experimented with.

General Butler, once placed in charge of the task of drying up the capital, need never waste a thought on its inhabitants' preferences or its habits.

No boss' threats need worry

Diet and Health

Shall We Omit the Setting-Up Exercises and Cold Shower?

Dr. Jesse P. Williams, professor of physical education, Teachers college, Columbia university, has certainly created a stir by his statement that morning setting-up exercises and cold showers are not so beneficial as is commonly supposed, and are "silly, superstitious and artificial."

Certainly setting-up exercises are artificial, but I don't agree with Dr. Williams that they are silly and superstitious. I do agree that they are not so beneficial as is believed: For the simple reason that they are not practiced systematically enough! Naturally, I'm talking about the normal, not those who have some contra-indication to exercises.

As I understand, Dr. Williams was against the set "setting-up" exercises, not exercises such as walking and games. Certainly games, especially outdoor games, that call into play most of the muscles of the body, are more beneficial than ordinary setting-up exercises. Golf, for instance, tennis, swimming and hiking, especially over hilly ground. But how about the many who haven't time for these diversions? They certainly should have some daily systematic exercise.

It is the exercises of the trunk muscles that you get in the setting-up exercises, that are of especial value. We have literally thousands of letters of appreciation from the use of our articles on the Tummy Ten, which outlines a series of exercises for the trunk. Posture has improved and posture has a great deal to do with normal health, constipation is remedied, many cases of misplacements of organs with the resultant aching backs are helped. Altogether, there is too much evidence from all sources of the benefits of setting-up exercises to discountenance them.

Our labor-saving devices—automobiles, elevators and other modern improvements—are taking away much of the natural exercise we used to get. Cancer, heart and kidney disease, liver disease, with the gall bladder trouble and stones, diabetes—the so-called degenerative diseases—are on the increase. And one of the reasons they are on the increase is that we do not get enough exercise. We continue the same eating habits that we used to use in youth, when we were more active, and we pile on weight. Overweight, with its stasis of the circulation, and tissue fluids, is the forerunner of many of the diseases I have mentioned.

As far as the cold bath is concerned, I am a firm believer in it. Personally, I like a tub of cold water better than I do the cold shower, and I get a kick from it that I'm sure is very beneficial. I wouldn't think of beginning the day without it. There is one pretty safe rule to go by, in the use of cold water—if you feel warm and glowing and alive after its use, then you should take it. Even those who do not get a good reaction could gradually condition themselves by first splashing cold water on the face and chest and daily increasing the surfaces that are splashed.

Dr. Williams is also reported to have said that the alarm clock is pernicious because it awakens us violently. I don't agree with him there, either, for I believe the better sleep, on account of the relief from worrying about whether one would wake up on time, counteracts the shock of the alarm. If one didn't awake on time, the hurry and worry of being late and the gulping down of the breakfast would also be more harmful than the shock.

I suggest you send for our article on the Atonic Abdominal Wall which gives the Tummy Ten exercises. And don't omit your setting-ups and your cold bath, if you are able to take them.

If you want to realize the value of exercise I suggest you read Dr. Williams' book, "Personal Hygiene Applied." I think his talk must have been misunderstood by the newspaper reporters.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I guess it's the same old story over and over again. You see I used to travel with every Tom, Dick and Harry. Then I met a wonderful young fellow two years my senior. I went with him and he finally told me he loved me.

"Well, I met a girl and she did a lot of persuading for me not to go with a steady fellow. I didn't know my own mind, and the young fellow thought I didn't care for him and didn't come any more. Well, the months went by, and I found I truly loved him. He came back and seems to love me more than ever.

"But Virginia, he doesn't really believe in me. Often he brings back the scene in March and says he's afraid to fall in love with me again. I gave up all my friends just to go with him. At times he says he believes me, but I know there is a doubt in his mind. We're planning to marry in two years. He hasn't given me a ring. Please tell me how I can prove to him that I love him.

"I wouldn't try any more, DUTCHY. You have told him so, you have given up your other friends for him, so if he doesn't believe you he will have to believe I don't think he does doubt you, really, but he likes to punish you by reminding you of your former attitude. Don't worry about it. Next time he mentions it, say: 'Actions speak louder than words, and I've proved my love by giving up my other friends for you.' He probably will give you a ring at Christmas time or when he can afford it.

ANXIOUS: I don't know the address of either boy. Anxious, and, as I've said often before, I cannot make you acquainted with my correspondents through this column.

KITTY: No, dear, a child would not inherit a very slight deformity that you contract through illness.

WORRIED: Insist that there was nothing wrong, state very emphatically to your father that your friend has never been too familiar, and tell him that he owes the young man an apology. Get your mother to take the same position, and, if your father does not beg his pardon and ask him to the house voluntarily, see or write your friend and tell him to write your father demanding such an apology or verbal retraction.

KITTY: I'm sure I don't know if the boy loves you or not, and I think it very unwise to "pick up" acquaintances like that.

PUZZLED: Bless your heart, dear, a girl of 11 is really pretty young to have boy friends, but if mother does not disapprove there is no harm in your corresponding with this boy if you like.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

PROUD OF HIS FAMILY NAME

Peter laughed and gay Sir Butterly was much offended.

"You humans haven't very good manners, have you?" queried he, quietly. "I wouldn't think of laughing at a friend of mine, even if he did make a mistake, as perhaps I did. I don't know what an elephant is, so how should I know whether he walks, crawls or hops? What's so funny about my believing that he may even fly?"

Peter was ashamed of himself. "Forgive me, dear Sir Butterly," he pleaded. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings, but if you could dream how large an elephant is, you'd understand why I couldn't help laughing. Imagine an animal twice as big as a cow, for instance, sailing through the air as you do!"

"Tee, hee," twittered Sir Butterly. "Now that I see the joke, I can laugh with you." But for all that, Sir Butterly was not quite sure yet that Peter was through laughing at him. So Peter decided to change the subject quickly.

"What a soft, rich color that is you're wearing, Sir Butterly!" (for wise in the ways of insect-had found that a little flattery worked wonders in soothing wounded feelings). "Did anyone ever tell you that your wings look exactly like fans? Say, old chap, are these wings of yours made of feathers? They are so soft and fluffy. I've been wondering if they were, ever since I met you, but I did not like to ask you until I knew you better."

Sir Butterly was pleased, one

couldn't doubt it.

"No wonder you ask that," replied he. "And let me tell you, boy, you are not the first one. Those fluffy things you mistake for feathers are scales—some folks call them plumes, I've heard. By the way, it is from our wings we get our names. Come to think of it, I haven't told you that, have I?"

"Why, isn't your name Butter-fly?" asked Peter, astonished.

"Butterfly, of course. But there's more to my name than that. I am a Scale-Wing. Cousin Moth belongs to the same family. Speaking of wings as we are, I believe," Sir Butterly waved a feeler at Peter, "we are glad we have them to get us where we are going and in a mighty hurry. But we Butterflies are proud of our legs, too. We have six legs—did you know it?"

"Not I," said Peter. "What do you do with all of them?"

"Stand on them while we rest and eat," declared the Butterly, promptly. "And say, did you know I had horns on my head?"

"Good gracious, no!" Now Peter was astonished.

"They have knobs on them, too," remarked Sir Butterly, promptly. "But if you think mine are pointed, you should see those which Cousin Moth boasts. They are as pointed that one dares get in his way at his own risk of being jabbed with them. Upon my word! Speak of a friend and he's apt to appear. Here comes Cousin Moth, now. Look at him as closely as you like, but don't laugh at him. He hates to be made fun of."

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

The task of predicting the outcome of major collegiate football games is proving a duck soup for Xenia fans so far this season. The record for the first two weeks is thirty-six correct out of a possible thirty-seven.

This week Arthur Bales, former Xenian, now associated with the Universal Car Loading Co., Dayton, has consented to pick probable winners in seventeen games carded for next Saturday.

Art, however, declined to pick either Wilberforce or North Carolina State College as the winner of their intercollegiate game Saturday, believing the game will end in a tie. This opinion is based on the fact that the "Pirates" has acquired a habit of playing draw games in recent years. Here are his selections:

Indiana to beat Chicago.
Cincinnati to beat Kenyon.
Yale to beat Georgia.
New York U. to beat Fordham.
Oberlin to beat Mt. Union.
Iowa to beat Ohio State.
Ohio Wesleyan to beat Ohio U.
Princeton to beat Brown.
Michigan to beat Purdue.
St. Xavier to beat W. Va. Wesleyan.

Syracuse to beat Nebraska.
Notre Dame to beat Navy.
Carnegie Tech to beat Western Reserve.
Wisconsin to beat Northwestern.
Wilberforce to tie North Carolina.

Wittenberg to beat Denison.
Pittsburgh to beat West Virginia.

A revision of the season's record gives the Reserves a record of eighteen victories against three defeats in twenty-one games played this season. Nine of the victories have been shutouts. Reserves have compiled a total of 140 runs, an average of six and two-thirds a game, as compared with forty-seven markers for the varsity team, an average of slightly more than two a game, indicating Jesse Chambliss' team has been getting high class pitching while the batting has also been consistently good. Reserves wind up the season in a return game with the H. and B. Oct. 17. Shoppe next Sunday with Dick Welles again on the mound trying to duplicate his 5 to 0 shutout victory registered last Sunday.

An example of what may be termed poor sportsmanship was furnished in Saturday's doubleheader between the New York Giants and the Phillies, in which Klein, outfielder for the Phillies, broke the National League home run record by ending in a tie with Mel Ott, of the Giants, for the honor for the season.

Philadelphia pitchers, in the hope of making the record safe for Klein, passed Ott no fewer than five times in the second game of the twin bill, thus depriving him of an opportunity to even hit the ball. It is possible that in the ordinary exercise of good judgment the pitchers were wise in issuing questions on sportsmanship to say the least with nothing of importance hinged on the outcome of the contest.

Many Xenia fans followed with interest the poll conducted by the Cincinnati Post among the readers of that newspaper relative to the choice of fans for the selection of the next manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

The poll ended last week with Larry Kopp, former Red outfielder, who has been managing the Midwestern Armco's, of the K. I. O. League, as the popular choice to succeed Jack Hendrick, Ed Roush, outfielder, who for many years starred in a Red uniform, was runnerup with Greasy Neale, another erstwhile Red player, getting third place.

It is also said that a number of petitions are being drawn up among the fans for presentation to the Cincinnati management through the Post, suggesting that Heinie Groh be appointed coach of the team.

CLEAR SKY GREET'S SERIES OPENING

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Dawn came here today with a clear sky and a reasonable temperature which supported the prediction of fair weather made by the weather bureau yesterday.

The weather man's forecast for the day of the first world series game was:

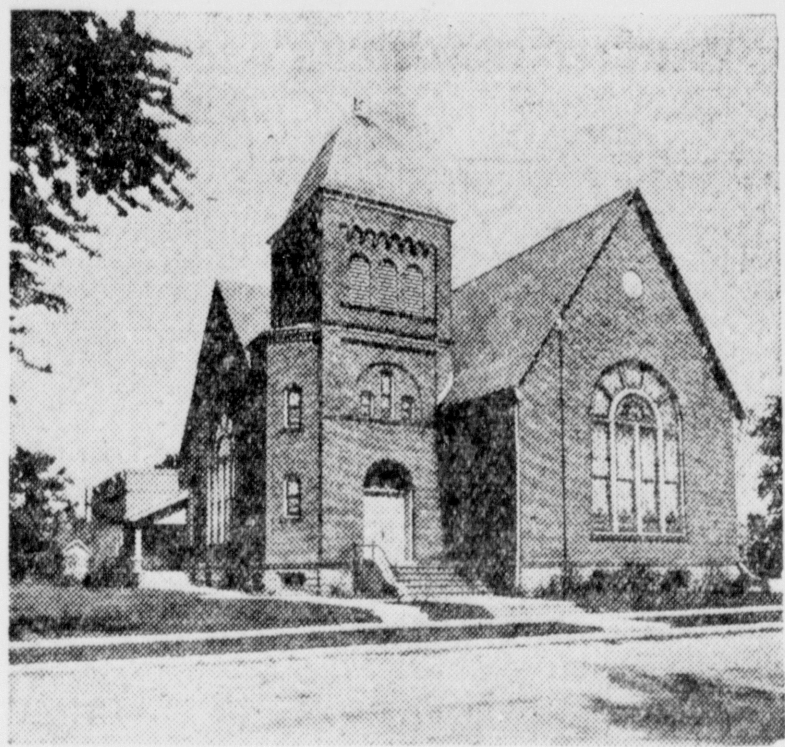

"Fair Tuesday with increasing cloudiness Wednesday, sixty degrees of temperature both afternoons."

NAMED ASSISTANT

Miss Helen Graham has been appointed assistant official court reporter for one year, effective Tuesday, by Common Pleas Judge A. L. Gowdy. She will draw a compensation of $10 a day for such days as her services as an assistant reporter are required.

SCOUT MEETING

Regular meeting of Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will be held at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Scout cabin, according to an announcement by Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury, who urges a full attendance.

REV. MILLIGAN

A feature of the Tuesday evening session of the annual two-day meeting of the Second Synod of the United Presbyterian Church at the Cedarville church of that denomination will be the celebration of the eighty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the church, (shown above.) The Rev. Ralph A. Jamieson, pastor, (left below) will preside at the special anniversary program and the anniversary sermon will be preached by the Rev. O. H. Milligan, (right below) pastor of the Avalon U. P. Church, Pittsburgh, one of the surviving pastors who served the church in its more than three-quarters of a century history.

OHIO STATE ELEVEN NOT SO HOT WITTENBERG GAME INDICATES

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 8.—All during the week-end, the writer spent his time trying to think of something encouraging to say about Ohio State's football team, but all that can be said today is that it may improve.

The Buckeyes' 19 to 6 victory over Wittenberg wasn't any too imposing and even the biggest optimist on the campus can't hope for State to beat Iowa.

Even though pre-season forecasts said that the "Scarlet and Gray" gridiron machine was only "fair," the small Wittenberg score was a big disappointment.

Sam Willaman, who is just starting his coaching career at the Big Ten school here, simply hasn't much high grade material. His first team is weak in spots. The forward wall withstood the attack of the Springfield eleven who were out for blood, but on the offensive the line was slow. The backfield, too, seemed to have trouble in getting started and

CENTRAL GRIDDE RS MEET PIQUA THERE SATURDAY IN LOOP GAME

A fighting but crippled Xenia Central High School football team is expected to take the field against Piqua High gridirers in the opening Miami Valley League game on the Piqua gridiron Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Undoubtedly Piqua will rule the favorite over the Bucs but Coach Wilson's pet will have an excellent opportunity to regain a measure of lost prestige.

The Buccaneer mentor is drilling his squad this week on new plays that will be used against Piqua. Special emphasis is also being placed on tackling and blocking, departments in which the Bucs were weak in their first two games.

HENRY HOLLENCAMP SUCCUMBS TUESDAY

Henry Hollencamp, 79, founder and president of the H. Hollencamp Sons Co., Jefferson St., Dayton, and one of Dayton's leading citizens, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Williamson, 32 Arnold Place, Tuesday morning at 12:30 o'clock, following a heart attack suffered Monday morning.

He had been in fairly good health until this time. His mind remained clear up to an hour before his death and he passed away surrounded by his children.

Funeral services will probably be held Friday at Sacred Heart Church in Dayton and burial will be made in Calvary Cemetery there.

FROST REPORTED

With a forecast of central Ohio's first real frost of the season Monday night, farmers covered their perishable vegetables and Xenians took their overcoats from cedar chests and moth balls, but although the predicted frost materialized, it was light and no reports of damage were received at the Greene County Farm Bureau. It was also explained that practically all perishable products had been harvested.

SUBJECT OF ROTARY

J. F. McMillan, president of the Dayton Rubber Manufacturing Co., Dayton and past president of the Dayton Rotary Club, was the speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Xenia Rotary Club at Ellet's Hotel Tuesday noon.

Mr. McMillan talked on the subject of "The New Thirteen Month Calendar" and his discussion greatly interested members.

The regular business session was held following the address.

OBSERVE HOLIDAY

"Columbus Day," Saturday, October 12, will be observed as a legal holiday by Xenia banks and other financial institutions, which will remain closed all day, according to an announcement Tuesday.

Bowling Scores

Amassing 2,745 pins, the Benrus Watch bowling team, occupants of second place in the Recreation League, made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Arch-O-Pedic Shoes Monday night. The winners rolled games of 202, 925 and 917. Theatrical White led the Benrus quintet with a three-game total of 601. Luttrell and Moore each had a 513 series for the losers. Box scores:

Artist Depicts High Spots in Colorful Career of Visiting British Leader

Born in 1866 of humble fishing folk in the little village of Moray Firth, Loggismouth, Scotland, MacDonald went to London at 19, where he got a job as bus conductor. Later became invoice clerk.

Overwork broke health at 21 and future looked black until he obtained post as secretary to member of parliament. Repudiated Liberalism in 1894 and became secretary of the new Labor party.

During the years of his greatest struggle MacDonald married Margaret Ethel Gladstone, niece of Lord Kelvin. She bore him five children and died in 1911. Constantly aided her husband's success.

He was made leader of the Labor party in 1911 and so grew in public esteem that he was offered post in war cabinet in 1914. Refused. Headed group of pacifists in house and was denounced as traitor.

He was returned again in the election of 1922 and was again made party leader. In 1924 MacDonald became prime minister and foreign secretary in group of pacifists in house the short-lived minority Labor government.

Defeated by Stanley Baldwin, he became leader of the opposition for four years, returning to power in the elections of May, 1929. Comes to America as good will gesture toward disarmament plans.

INTERESTING SHIP TO PARTICIPATE IN AIR TOUR

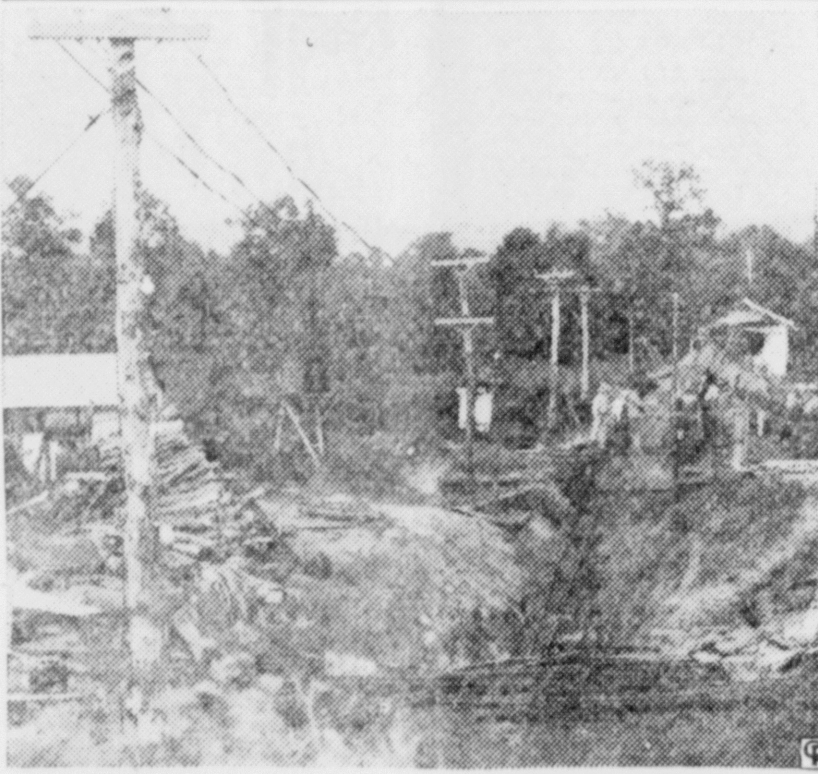

When the 30 or 40 airplanes take off from Ford airport, near Detroit, for the 5,200-mile cruise of the national air tour, officials and newspaper men will travel in this huge Curtiss transport, largest plane on the tour. Several variations characterize the ship, among them, the absence of a motor on the nose, and the water-cooled engine. It also goes back to the biplane type for lower landing speed with minimum span. The props are three-bladed to take up the enormous power of the engines. The capacity is 18 passengers and two pilots.

Loves Young Dream Loses Him His Parish

The Reverend Walter A. Miller, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Corinth, N. Y., with his fiancée, Miss Mina G. Clothier (inset), who was asked to resign his charge when deacons of the parish found that the minister attended dances with his bride to be. The request was recalled, however, when Rev. Miller promised the church authorities that he would shun the art of terpsichore in the future.

WHERE MINE BLAST KILLED EIGHT

Eight miners were instantly killed at this mine at Shady Point, Okla., when a gas explosion occurred. One miner, who stopped to tie his shoelace, at the mouth of the mine, was blown 300 feet over the tippie and through the engine house. Photo shows some of wreckage.

Are You a Good Driver?

Don't straddle two lanes! The forward car in this picture is doing so and obstructs the view of the driver behind. If he attempts to pass he will have to straddle the inner lane, causing danger of accident and much profanity. Take your time, it's safer.

DeVere, Auburn, R. I., chairman of safety committee; Mrs. William Bryce, Jr., Bedford, Pa., president of Pennsylvania.

AGUA CALIENTE'S TRACK MARKS END OF TIJUANA

BREAKING GROUND for the new AGUA CALIENTE RACE TRACK

Tijuana's Jockey club race track, 100 yards across the border, in Mexico, is no more. In its place will spring, three miles further east and also on the border, another track which will contain several innovations in race track construction and facilities for handling the public. The new track, which will cost $2,000,000 and will be completed some time in December, is to be known as the Agua Caliente Jockey club track. There will be nine private stables, in addition to the club house, paddock, recreation center and other buildings. Completion of the track will mark the passing of control by "Sunny" Jim Coffroth. He will be associated with Wirt G. Bowman, lower left, president of the new outfit. At top, breaking ground at Agua Caliente, and, lower right, diagram of the track.

Aimee's Ma Scorned Him

Stating in a Seattle court that he had been damaged "beyond monetary consideration," the Rev. H. H. Clark (below), of Seattle, Wash., fired his opening gun in a $50,000 breach of promise suit brought against Mrs. Minnie E. Kennedy (top), mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist. He in turn heard himself classed as blackmailer in the statements of the defense counsel. He claims Mrs. Kennedy had promised to marry him and build a tabernacle in Seattle in which he could conduct his religious work.

May Haizlip, of Kansas City, Mo. (above), and Francis Harrel (below) will pilot planes in the National Air Tour which will visit all the principal cities in the United States in the near future.

THE OCTOBER PETIT JURY CONVENED IN COMMON PLEAS COURT TUESDAY FOR THE TRIAL OF THE $10,000 DAMAGE SUIT FILED BY OPAL BOWES AGAINST THE CLEVELAND, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS RAILWAY CO., RECALLING A GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT AT OSBORN AUGUST 22, 1928 IN WHICH THE PLAINTIFF ALLEGES SHE WAS INJURED PERMANENTLY. THE JURY WAS TAKEN TO OSBORN TUESDAY MORNING TO VIEW THE ACCIDENT SCENE.

It is the contention of the plaintiff that the auto in which she and her husband, Arthur, and Philip Froikin were riding was demolished by a cut of flat cars which was being backed across the Xenia Drive crossing.

Froikin was demonstrating the car to Mr. and Mrs. Bowes, who were prospective purchasers.

Mrs. Bowes claims she was thrown out of the machine, her right side was badly bruised, her right knee injured and that she sustained a cut on the forehead that will leave a permanent scar.

It is charged the crossing was not protected by gates but that the railroad had installed an automatic signal device which failed to function. It is also claimed that Froikin, who was familiar with the crossing relied on the signal device being in proper working order.

TOOK 31 YEARS TO DELIVER CARD

LONDON, O., Oct. 8.—There's a deep, dark postcard mystery at New Holland, near here, which has the authorities guessing today.

A government postcard was included in a pouch of mail which was received here. The card is dated January 29, 1898. It bears both the postmarks of Clarksburg and Atlanta on the 1898 date and is addressed to Mrs. Margaret Graham of New Holland.

Clarksburg and Atlanta are almost within a day's throw of New Holland and postal authorities are wondering where the card has been for the past thirty-one years.

The mystery is deepened by a third postmark, Mexico, Mo., with an unreadable date in September of this year.

TRAVELOGUE TO BE HEARD BY KIWANIS

The Misses Kate and Julia, Schwebel, who recently returned to their home in this city, after a trip of two months through Germany and other places of interest in Europe, will be guest speakers at the regular weekly meeting of the Xenia Kiwanis Club, at Elks' Hall, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

T. C. Long, delegate of the Kiwanis convention at Maciatta last week, will tell of some of the sessions which he attended.

The committee in charge of the programs, for each meeting this month, is composed of the following: J. Carl Marshall, Dr. Austin M. Patterson, Ernest Beatty, the Rev. W. N. Shank and Dr. G. W. Kuhn.

"KONJOLA-THAT'S MY ADVICE TO ALL WHO SUFFER"

Happy Lady Tells How New Medicine Put A Quick End To Liver Trouble and Rheumatism

"I marvel at the powers of this new Konjola," said Mrs. R. Dunbar, Route No. 2, Canton, Ohio. "I find it difficult to believe that two years of suffering from rheumatism has been so quickly and completely ended. For two years I had rheumatic pains all over me, and at times was scarcely able to walk across a room. Then, too, my liver was sluggish and I had frequent dizzy spells. My system was full of impurities.

"A friend suggested that I try Konjola and put it to the test. How this wonderful medicine went to the very source of my troubles was simply astounding. My improvement was immediate, and day by day I became better and stronger. Today the rheumatic pains and dizzy spells have vanished and I can walk around the house all day without even feeling tired. Konjola—that's my advice to all who suffer, because I know it is a wonderful medicine."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at Galisher drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. Adv.

Sorrow and fear have clutched the hearts and minds of the family of Henry S. Thompson, millionaire Detroit real estate dealer, since the disappearance of their son, Jackie (inset), aged 5. THEATER GUILD MEMBERSHIP DRIVE LAUNCHED AT MEETING

Final plans for the membership drive for the 1929-30 season of The Little Theater Guild of Xenia, were laid at a meeting of the Guild executive committee in the Probate Court offices in the Court House Monday evening.

The drive will be launched this week and tickets will be in the hands of the executive and the membership committees. Members of the executive committee are: Miss Lorena Paulin, president; Mrs. M. L. Wolf, first vice president; Mrs. Steele Poague, second vice president; Marcus McCallister, third vice president; Miss Faye Cavanaugh, secretary; James Wilson, III, treasurer; Miss Allegra Hawes, membership; I. M. Hyman, properties; Miss Helen Little, costumes; Mrs. Lawrence Shields, play reading and Miss Alice Foley, publicity.

Members of the membership committee are: Miss Allegra Hawes, chairman; Frederick Anderson, Harry Kiernan, Harry A. Higgins, Mrs. J. H. Whitmer, Mrs. Karl R. Babo and Miss Josephine Wolf.

An active campaign will be conducted by the membership committee and memberships will also be received at prominent locations in Xenia, to be announced later.

Two hundred people were members of the Guild last season, the first year of the organization, and it is hoped to obtain 300 members this year. An effort will be made to obtain out-of-town members this season and all Greene County people interested in the Theater Guild's work will be welcomed.

"Tea for Three," a recent Broadway success, is announced as the Guild's first play for this season.

OPPOSES ROAD

Following a recommendation of County Surveyor W. J. Were appointed as members in charge, John Pulliam and Roland Rice were appointed to take charge of the advertising.

It was also decided to have the next meeting in form of an invitation meeting to initiate the eight new boys to be admitted to the club. John Hurley, Robert Hardy and Joe Smittle were appointed to make arrangements for the initiation. Coach "Pinky" Wilson attended the meeting as a guest and gave an interesting talk on H-Y work. Pinky was at one time a member during his college days and is very much interested in the work of the club at Central. He gave a few short illustrations of the work that is carried on by some clubs. He was elected an honorary member of the club.

After a few more talks and discussion the meeting was adjourned.

NEW BOOKS AT LIBRARY

NON FICTION
Palmer—"Clark of the Ohio."
With the approach of the Lewis and Clark celebration, this book with its unusually valuable picture of Clark and his part in the making of the West should be of unusual interest.

Sandburg—"American Songbag."
A collection of American songs, interesting as revealing one side of the character of the people who made and sang them. Other than the Spanish songs and Negro spirituals, the Songbag may be more a factor in the social history of America than of real musical value. It is an achievement in the collection of song-love.

Rose—"The Stump Farm."
The heroic story of a woman who with her elderly husband and a small son, wins a meager living from the soil of a stump farm in the Northwest, and has the courage to take up a homestead and start all over again so her husband may die in his homeland.

Olyanova—"What Does Your Handwriting Reveal?"
A clever analysis of character through handwriting, illustrated with specimens of the handwriting of well known people.

Mussolini—"My Biography."

is told as if it were a function of Mussolini's personality. On its literary side, hurriedly dictated though it may be, this book has a recognized place in Italian literature. The account of the march to Rome is superior to any recorded at the time, or since.

Mumford—"Herman Melville."
An interesting interpretation of Herman Melville's life and thought, from his writings, letters and notebooks. A record singularly complete in that part of Melville which most matters; his ideas, his feelings and his inspiration.

Sheldon—"Television."
A practical description of the telegraphing of photographs and visual images.

Sherman and Sherman—"Process of Human Behavior."
The authors trace the development of human personality from its origin in nerves and emotions. For the reader who has graduated from popularized psychology, this book reveals at first hand the scientist's discoveries and knowledge of human behavior.

EAST HIGH NOTES

Take "A Trip to Paris" with M. Monplaisir Christophe, at East High School Friday night at 8:15.

M. Monplaisir Christophe is a native Frenchman from Valenciennes, France, who is pursuing an education in University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He comes here highly recommended by the University faculty, churches and schools which have been so fortunate as to hear him speak.

His lecture "A Trip to Paris" not only contains some very interesting facts concerning his native country but also gives a number of instructive events of the world war in which he was a participant. He also illustrates this lecture with a series of scenes of Paris and other interesting places in France. Be sure and hear him, Friday, October 11th at 8:15 o'clock.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE NOTES

The new year at Cedarville College has opened with the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The freshman class alone shows an increase over last year of almost 60 per cent, and constitutes an unusually fine group.

That the Cedarville product is in demand in the schools of the state is shown by the fact that every member of the last graduating class desiring to teach has obtained a good position. The young people taking the two-year course also are all well located.

The supply of teachers is not equal to the demand, a strong recommendation of the Cedarville product.

New members of the faculty this year number three and are as follows: Miss Norma D. Wood, A. M., professor of romance languages and public speaking, who received her A. B. and B. S. degrees from Ohio State University in 1928 and A. M. degree from Ohio State in 1929; Miss Dorothy Arneville, A. N., professor of Latin and English and dean of women, who received her A. The right way to redye Finest Silks

TEXTILE manufacturers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the only way to secure the most perfect results. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home users to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of pure silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the blue package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors, with greater depth and permanence than any "all purpose" dye.

These special Diamond Dyes are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, they contain the highest quality anilines money can buy. That's what makes them go on so smoothly and evenly, without spotting or streaking. That's the secret of their brilliance and their resistance to sunlight, wear and washing.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the highest quality dye prepared for general use. It will dye, or in silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon (artificial silk), or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye for silk or wool only—with it you can dye your valuable articles of pure silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk or wool. Your dealer has both packages.

CHATTY GODDESS OF CAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CHAPTER XLIX

Chatty sat up in her chair, very straight and tall, momentarily sobered. George! There was George—there, there!

She raised a hand to wave it—then drew it back. How did she know who he was? It couldn't be Billie, at this hour, at this place.

"Sure, 'taint Billie! Poor, poor Billie! So trusting, so good—and that no-count George Mayhew, running around with other girls. But I'll fix him—I don't have to keep quiet any more! All I got to do is watch, and see—and then go tell Billie! All right for you, Mr. George Mayhew! Make a date with another girl, will you, and break my poor Billie's heart? Not if I see you or—Ldo see you!"

When Bryant came Chatty demanded to dance again. She didn't tell him why—that she wanted to see who George Mayhew was with. Bryant might not like that.

But Bryant danced with her, obediently. She danced through all three rooms—but she couldn't locate George Mayhew anywhere.

"I know what he's done—he's gotten a private room!" she thought, nodding her head. "Smart Billie! George Mayhew! Well, I'll fix you anyhow! I'll just wait around, and around, and around."

But this Chatty found she couldn't do. It was now long after midnight.

"No, don't want to wait any longer! Liquor here is all run out!" he lied. "Get plenty more at home—come on! That's a good Billie sport."

Chatty was too far gone in mind and body to resist. There was some reason she wanted to stay. Oh, yes, to see George and what girl he had with him. Nasty, deceiving George! But after all, what girl didn't matter! Any girl was enough. She'd tell Billie tomorrow! She'd tell all the girls tomorrow! She'd be silent long enough.

"A right!" she hiccupped. "Let's go!"

He led her to the cloak room, paid her tip to the coat girl, and took her arm. Very straight, slowly and deliberately they walked out of the lobby; careful to be dignified and very, very sober.

Bryant leaned her carefully against a post while he went for his car.

When he drove up in it, Chatty surprised him by wanting to drive. "No time like this time!" she insisted. "Want to drive car. Want an answer. Don't need a lesson, but want one, anyhow! Isn't that funny? Slide over, old dear, and let me get at the wheel."

"Sure, sure!" agreed Bryant. "No time like this! Give you the car if you want it. Ain't you going to give me something worth more than a car? Give us a kiss, like a good girl."

"Stop! Don't want to kiss! Want to drive!" insisted Chatty.

Bryant slid over and Chatty tumbled, rather than climbed, into the driver's seat. Chatty started the car and turned it skillfully into the driveway. As she paused at the gate to wrap her coat around her, a yellow roadster shot by.

She had just a flash of the driver's face—George Mayhew.

"Well, now, do you think you can't?" she jeered. "See that car?"

"Sure I see it! Nice Billie car!" answered Bryant.

"In it is George Mayhew!" cried Chatty. "With a girl!"

"George Mayhew—girl!" repeated Bryant, vacantly.

"Billie Langenau's George Mayhew!" explained Chatty, impatiently. "With a girl! I want to see the girl! You game?"

"Sure game. Always game! 'Shoot 'em' works!" declared Bryant. "What you going do?"

"Watch 'em!" snapped Chatty. "Watch my smoke!"

Chatty turned the car into the road and stepped on the gas.

Far down the road sped a lone red light—George Mayhew and a girl.

Chatty set out to catch them, to see the girl. All the starved, gossip part of her demanded to know what woman took George Mayhew away from Billie Langenau. Dear, dear Billie! so good, so kind, so sweet, so decent.

And George Mayhew, taking some girl around to road houses in the middle of the night! Doubtless he had been with Billie all evening.

Billie's man was George Mayhew, and he was running around with some girl, and Chatty just had to know who it was!

She stepped harder on the gas. The car flew down the road like a good road, and wide. As all motorists know, it is easier to "tear" a car at speed than when going slowly—provided nothing gets in the way.

Nothing got in the way. "Atta girl!" shrieked Bryant.

"Step on her, baby, and show them her heels. This Billie! Give it to her!"

Chatty "gave it to her."

She had had but a few lessons in driving. She had never driven a car more than twenty-five miles an hour in her life. Now the steel monster under her hands throbbed and pulsed with power. The accelerator went down, down, down. The needle on the dial crept up, up, up.

Thirty, thirty-five, forty, forty-five, fifty.

"Hold her, girl, hold her!" Bryant looked at her adoringly.

"Some Billie driver!" he yelled. "Catch anything! Catch a flying machine. Catch a balloon! Catch a fish, catch a George Mayhew!"

Fifty, fifty-one, fifty-three, fifty-five—the needle crept slowly, but surely, over the figures. The red light ahead gleamed redder, brighter.

"Get away with it, will you?" demanded Chatty, of no one in particular. "Think you can double-cross my friend? Not on your life."

She took one hand from the wheel to press down the horn button. The car ahead swerved to one side to let her pass. But Chatty did not want to pass. She wanted to see. She slowed up, just enough to keep the two cars level, so she could look at the feminine face next George's shoulder.

The road narrowed. A curve appeared. Chatty had one long, short stare into the girl's eyes—and her mouth fell open in utter surprise. The girl was Billie Langenau!

Then a shriek, a yell, a grinding of metal on metal, a linking of fenders and, both cars together, locked in a tight embrace, slid off the road, into the ditch!

Yells of fear, cries of pain, thunderous roars; a flash of lightning, an explosion, a stunning crash—and the lights went out for Chatty.

As the darkness descended and her ocean of pain was blotted out by unconsciousness she cried out.

But it was not Bryant's name that she shrieked in that last moment of conscious life.

The Theater

H. L. Binder, owner and manager of the Orphium Theater, announces that he is installing talkie movie apparatus and will be able to start showing vocaloids November 12 when Warner's "Noah's Ark" will be the first outloud.

The Orphium will thus find other features. Although Mr. Hibbert has not announced his book-ings, they will probably include Paramount, M-G-M. and Fox pictures.

The Orphium will be silent for a time on Mondays and Fridays, while silent pictures already bought will be run, the talkies being used on the other nights. When the silent pictures are exhausted, talkies will be used for all programs. The talkie apparatus at the Orphium will be tested for a week before the official opening, it is said.

In the meantime work is progressing on the booth being built at the Bijou, made necessary by the talkie installation. While an opening date has not been announced, it is assured that the theater will be ready for the initial showing sometime this month.

Twenty Years '09- Ago '29

Contracts for remodeling the old Y. M. C. A. building and for roofing the building were let by the directors of the association.

The work of macadamizing two and one-fourth miles of the Wilmington Pike is progressing rapidly.

The candidacy of Mayor W. F. Brennan, for re-election is announced.

The 27th annual reunion of the 10th Ohio Battery was held.

The Bijou Theater was packed to capacity, for all three performances of Bush's Wild West Indian Show, one of the most expensive attractions on the vaudeville stage.

of small-town picture houses. It is doubtful if there is another city this size in the state in which all theaters have been equipped with sound apparatus and the condition here bespeaks the progressiveness of Xenia's theater magnates and merits the support of Xenia theatergoers.

One Wilmington theater, the Murphy, was opened Saturday night for talkies, after its management was taken over by Phil Chakares, Springfield theater man. The Murphy was also equipped with new seats. Information from Wilmington says that the theater was not able to accommodate the crowds, Al Jolson's "Say It With Songs" was the opening outloud and Jolson is always big box-office.

Mr. Binder has seen the motion picture industry in Xenia grow from a crude, imperfect thing to its present grandeur. Lots of water has gone through the mill since he deserted the coal business to become a celluloid impresario here, but his present announcement indicates how he has kept pace with progress in the industry.

The installation of talkies is a big step for the Orphium, because it means first class, first-run, high-price pictures for that house. Mr. Binder has booked Warner Bros. offerings, including "The Desert Song", "On With the Show" and

GIUSEPPE DI BENEDETTO

(Editor's Note: This is another of a series of sketches of the most prominent radio artists of the day. Others follow.)

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY
NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—They call him "the man who might have been a second Caruso."

To a Neapolitan who loves his music as he loves his life Giuseppe di Benedetto came very near making a "supreme sacrifice," when poison gas and shrapnel "Over There" stilled the bird in his throat for seven months.

Giuseppe was a captain in the Italian army, and it was at Col di lano that his world fell around him and he was sent to the hospital for months, a pitiful human wreck. The fates gave him back his voice. It is one of the best on the air. But, Giuseppe had prayed to walk in the footsteps of his beloved countryman, Caruso.

In "Neapolitan Nights" When you hear him in "Neapolitan Nights," perhaps you catch the heartbreak a bit and feel in the poignancy of his tones a little of what he has suffered. But, if you could be in the studio with him and see his ruddy, smiling face as he turns from the "mike" and comes back from his Naples to the everyday studio world, you would find it hard to believe that he carries a cross.

"My 'Felix' now he is eight. Ah, he is the genius! You should hear him play now. Accompanies me like a grown man. Such sympathy, such technique. The twins, my boy and my girl, love music like real Neapolitans, too. We are a happy family."

Sometimes the little di Benedetto gets a fit of pride over their father being an American citizen and are so eager to emphasize it among the neighbor boys that the art of flattery almost gets the upper hand. Papa di Benedetto chuckles a little when he tells of this—and one can't help but believe he might even be able to sit in on a prize fight without having his artistic soul pained too much by the sight of many combat.

And, what a blow this must be

Fancy! For this surely should have a medal. He must be the first who can be classed with the artists to admit such a dreadful streak of hol polloi.

"It is wonderfully refreshing—jazz," he admits, without a shiver. "It is my honest opinion that, oh, so many what you call high-hat people secretly tune in on a jazz orchestra when no one is listening. There is no danger of it ruining the world—for a few years yet, at least, I expect to be able to survive it."

A Colorful Figure

Giuseppe di Benedetto is one of the most colorful personalities on the air when he broadcasts. He stands back a short distance from the mike, head thrown back and eyes closed, and seems to be trying to send his entire self out with his golden voice.

Near him is Joe Biviano, slender dark-eyed Italian, with his accordion swung around his shoulders on a brilliant green strap. Joe was discovered, a poor unknown, playing for nickels and dimes on a Staten Island ferry. Dark, sloe-eyed Neapolitan girl songbirds give the setting an atmosphere so foreign that it seems to be a bit of Italy itself.

TWAIN WILLING TO DIVIDE HIS PART

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 8.—Mark Twain confessed a tremendous appetite in a letter recently loaned to the Missouri Historical Society here. In declining an invitation to dinner at the home of P. D. Peltier, Twain wrote:

"Mean time will you kindly see that the portion of your banquet which I should be allowed to consume, if I were present, is equitably distributed among the public charities of our several states and territories? I would not want any partiality shown on account of political creed or geographical position, but would beg that all the crates be of the same height."

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

The grand row over the new tariff on sugar is now in earnest in Washington, and I do not look for any let-up for at least six more weeks.

At the end of some unknown period of time a sugar tariff schedule of some sort will have been hammered through the senate and house of representatives, and then, for the first time, the farm interests of the country will know "where they are at."

Although past history should have been sufficient warning, to be sure, I have been somewhat surprised at the intensity of the protest on the proposed new duties.

The Cuban sugar interests are very active, of course, and newspaper and magazine editorial offices are bombarded with eloquent and almost fearful protests at the terrible injustice of wrecking the Cuban sugar market in this country.

I do not say that these protests are not entirely proper, and entirely sincere. Although it must always be remembered that the sugar plantations and mills in Cuba are owned chiefly by New York capital. Undoubtedly a depression in the sugar business is a serious thing for the people and government of Cuba.

But the farming interests of the United States are inclined to look at the problem with an unsentimental eye. They have not the least desire to take the food out of the mouth of the Cuban child; but they look at the 16,000,000 acres of the best farm land, that would be needed to grow sugar beets if we did not import raw cane sugar from Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii and elsewhere. They would like to see that land used for sugar, and thus withdrawn from its present production of farm crops, so as to reduce the oversupply of many things that depresses the prices thereof.

If some other method could be devised for taking that 16,000,000 acres from its present use, and turning it to some profitable new crop, sugar or anything else, it would be equally satisfactory to farmers, no doubt.

They are not fighting Cuban sugar and Cuban citizens; they are fighting their own over-production of such things as potatoes, oats, and wheat.

All these factors and many others are involved in the grand Washington sugar fight, and just how it will come out is something no one can tell, not even Senator Smoot or the president himself.

That Brutal Overseer Roasts in Hades! AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Wise legislation has halted the ancient prejudice that dictated the exploitation of child labor for selfish gain. Guided by AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE it has routed greed. No longer are little children forced into slavery.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

problem. And when the treaties came up for ratification they were most savagely fought and bitterly criticized. As successful, however, as Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald have been in resolving Anglo-American problems, there are still danger points in the forthcoming parley, chiefly the attitude of France and Italy. The tone of the French press already is critical, if not actually hostile. It was with this in mind that the British premier spoke to the senate so emphatically in opposition to any alliance, and it is because of this that President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson lost no opportunity to emphasize that
